PREFACE	v
1	Setting 1
	1.1 Focus and Aim 1
	1.2 The Study of Language 2
	1.3 The Data of Linguistics 5
	1.4 Something about Method 15
	Bibliographical Note 18
	Problems and Questions 19
2	Grammars and Languages 21
	2.1 Why Study Grammars? 21
	2.2 Finite and Infinite 24
	2.3 Languages 26
	2.4 Generative Grammars 28
	2.5 Example 30
	2.6 Unrestricted Rewriting Grammars 32
	Problems and Questions 35
3	Phrase-Structure Grammars 37
	3.1 Phrase-Markers 37
	3.2 Phrase-Structure Grammars 39
	3.3 Ordering of Rules 44
	3.4 Abbreviatory Conventions 46
	3.5 A Phrase-Structure Grammar for English 48
	3.6 The Reality of P-Markers 51

	3.7 The Adequacy of Phrase-Structure Grammars	56
	Problems and Questions	56
4	The Nature of Linguistic Elements		58
	4.1 Formatives	58
	4.2 Formatives as Complex Objects	63
	4.3 Syntactic Features	66
	4.4 Grammars with Complex Symbols	67
	4.5 Categorical Elements	70
	Problems and Questions	71
5	Grammatical Transformations		73
	5.1 Some Further Inadequacies of Phrase-Structure Grammars	73
	5.2 Grammatical Transformations	79
	5.3 Some Examples of Transformations	89
	5.4 Restricting Transformations	96
	5.5 Another Argument for Transformational Grammars	101
	Problems and Questions	102
6	A Theory of Transformational Grammar		104
	6.1 Introductory Outline	104
	6.2 The Base	105
	6.3 The Transformational Cycle	110
	6.4 Precyclic and Last-cyclic Rules	125
	6.5 The Semantic Component	130
	6.6 Transformational Theory before Aspects : A Short Sketch	133
	Problems and Questions	139
7	Syntactic Arguments		142
	7.1 How to Think about Syntax	142
	7.2 There -Insertion	143
	7.3 Raising	146
	7.4 Extraposition	152
	7.5 Passive	158
	7.6 Interrelationships among the Rules	163
	7.7 Some Common Types of Syntactic Arguments	166
	Problems and Questions	177

8	The Mathematical Theory of Grammars	179
	8.1 Why Do Mathematical Linguistics?	179
	8.2 Finite-State Systems	181
	8.3 Turing Machines and Unrestricted Rewriting Systems	189
	8.4 The Hierarchy of Languages and Rewriting Grammars	197
	8.5 The Weak Generative Capacity of Transformational Grammars	198
	Problems and Questions	204
9	Revisions in Transformational Theory	206
	9.1 A Change of Emphasis	206
	9.2 Comparing Theories	207
	9.3 Weakenings of the Theory	214
	9.4 Transformations Plus and Minus	216
	9.5 Abstract Elements	219
	9.6 The Relationship between Semantics and Syntax	222
	9.7 Derivational Constraints	234
	9.8 Conclusions	235
10	Explanations in Linguistics	237
	10.1 Procedure	237
	10.2 Levels of Adequacy in Linguistics	237
	10.3 Explanatory Adequacy	240
	10.4 Explanation in General	251
11	Universal Grammar	253
	11.1 Orientation	253
	11.2 Evidence for Substantive Universals in Syntax	253
	11.3 Universal Aspects of the Base	259
	11.4 The Peters-Ritchie Results on Limiting the Base	263
	11.5 Universal Transformations	265
	11.6 Functional Explanations	277
	Epilogue	280
	BIBLIOGRAPHY	281
	INDEX	291
