

Table of Contents

1.0 Introduction	1
1.1 The Importance of the History of Semantics for the History of Linguistics	1
1.2 Review of Literature	4
1.3 The Purpose and Scope of This Book	8
1.4 General Overview	12
1.4.1 The Development of Semantics, in Germany, France, and England	12
1.4.2 Inner- and Interdisciplinary Influences	20

Part I

2.0 The Development of Semasiology in Germany	29
2.1 Introduction and Overview	29
2.2 Reisig – A Broad Programme for Semasiology	33
2.2.1 Grammar	34
2.2.2 Lexicography	35
2.2.3 Semasiology as a Logico-Historical Discipline	35
2.2.4 Reisig’s Conception of Signs	39
2.2.5 Synonymology	39
2.2.6 Conclusion	40
2.3 Tobler’s Etymo-Logical Semasiology	41
2.4 Haase – Semasiology between History and Philosophy	43
2.4.1 Haase and Reisig – Similarities and Differences	43
2.4.2 Haase’s Conception of Semasiology	44
2.5 Heerdegen – Logico-Historical Semasiology at Its Best	45
2.5.1 Heerdegen’s Conception of Grammar	46
2.5.2 Heerdegen’s Contribution to Semasiology	47

2.6 Hey – Towards a Psychological Semasiology	49
2.6.1 Hey and Heerdegen	49
2.6.2 Hey and Hecht against Heerdegen	50
2.6.3 Conclusion	52
2.7 The Psychological Tradition in Semasiology	53
– Völkerpsychologie Mark 1
2.7.1 Concepts, Presentations, and Meanings	54
– A Conceptual Confusion
2.7.2 Steinthal – Meaning as ‘Apperception’	56
2.7.3 Lazarus – Meaning and Understanding	62
2.7.4 Hecht – A Psychological Semasiology	66
2.8 The Schoolmasters’ Interlude – Thomas and Schmidt	68
2.8.1 Thomas’ Classification of Types and Causes of Semantic Change	69
2.8.2 Schmidt’s Classification of Causes of Semantic Change	70
2.9 The Psychological Tradition in Semasiology	73
– Völkerpsychologie Mark 2
2.9.1 Wundt Compared to Steinthal and Lazarus	73
2.9.2 Rosenstein – An Application of Wundt’s Theory of Semasiology	75
2.9.3 Wundt’s Psychological Classification of Semantic Changes	77
2.9.4 Wundt and Beyond	79
2.10 Official Semantics and Semantic Innovators	80
2.10.1 Wegener – Semantics and Communication	81
2.10.2 Paul – Official Semantics	87
2.10.3 Stöcklein – Meaning and the Sentential Context	95
2.10.4 Erdmann – The Multiplicity of Meaning	98
2.11 Meaning and Emotion	103
2.11.1 Sperber – A Semasiology of Affective Meaning	104
2.11.2 Wellander – Meaning and the Hearer	107
2.11.3 Gustav Bally – The Psychology of Name-Giving	110
2.11.4 Leumann – Semantics beyond Sperber	113
2.11.5 Weisgerber and the End of German Semasiology	116
2.12 Stern’s Theory of Meaning and Change of Meaning	118
– The Apotheosis of the Semasiological Tradition

Part II

3.0 The Development of la Sémantique in France	125
3.1 Introduction	125
3.2 Ideology and Lexiology	126
3.3 Littré – Semantics and Lexicography	129
3.4 Bréal – First Steps towards Semantics as a Human Science	131
3.4.1 From Form to Function	133
3.4.2 Latent Ideas and the Construction of Meaning	135
3.5 Darmesteter – A First Programme for Semantics	138
3.6 Back to Bréal and the Establishment of la sémantique	141
3.7 Back to Darmesteter and a Biological-Rhetorical Model for Semantic Change	142
3.8 Darmesteter – A Centre of Innovations and Controversies	145
3.8.1 Bréal – Etymology Is not Important, but the Speaker Is	147
3.8.2 Gaston Paris – A Dialogical Approach to Semantic Change	151
3.8.3 Victor Henry – Semantics and the Unconscious	152
3.8.4 Svedelius – A New Classification of Causes of Semantic Change	153
3.9 Bréal's Essai de sémantique	156
3.9.1 Bréal in Context	157
3.9.2 The Intellectual Laws of Semantic Change	160
3.9.3 Analogy, Polysemy, and Ellipsis	161
3.9.4 The Subjective Element – From Semantics to Pragmatics	163
3.10 French Psycho-Semantics	165
3.10.1 Paulhan – A Functional Approach to Language and Meaning	166
3.10.2 Roudet – A Psychology of Semantic Change	171
3.11 French Socio-Semantics	173
3.11.1 Meillet – Language and Social Structure	174
3.11.2 Nyrop – Illustrations of Semantic Themes	185
3.11.3 Vendryes – The End of a Tradition	188

3.12 From Diachrony to Synchrony	191
3.12.1 De La Grasserie – Static and Dynamic Semantics	192
3.12.2 Charles Bally – From the Life of Language to Language and Life	195
3.12.3 Bally and Beyond	203
3.13 Conclusion	204

Part III

4.0 The Development of Semantics in England – From Sematology to Significs and Beyond	207
4.1 Introduction	207
4.2 Smart's Sematology	209
4.2.1 Horne Tooke's Metaphysical Etymology	209
4.2.2 Outline of a Contextual View of Meaning	210
4.2.3 Language and Thought	213
4.3 Garnett's Criticism of English Lexicography	215
4.4 The New Philological Approach to Meaning	216
4.4.1 Trench – Words, Senses, and Sins	216
4.4.2 The New English Dictionary	219
4.4.3 Sayce – Sematology, Semasiology and Analogy	221
4.5 Meaning, Action, and Mind	224
4.5.1 Whitney – An American Contribution to Semantics	225
4.5.2 Oertel – European Semantics Revisited	231
4.6 Language, Thought, and Meaning	236
4.6.1 Stout – Thought and Language	236
4.6.2 Lady Welby's Significs	241
4.6.3 Ogden & Richards – The Meaning of Meaning	247
4.6.4 Malinowski	254
4.6.5 Walpole – The Science of Symbolism in the Classroom	256
4.7 British Contextualism	258
4.7.1 Gardiner – Meaning and the Thing-Meant	258
4.7.2 Conclusion and Outlook	266

Notes	269
Abbreviations	293
Bibliographies of Primary Sources	295
Semasiology in Germany (1800-1950)	297
La sémantique in France (1800-1950)	316
Semantics in England (and the USA) (1800-1950)	324
Semantics (1820-1950): Other Countries	332
References (Secondary Sources)	333
Index of Authors	347
Index Rerum	356