

Table of contents

Preface	V
List of conference participants	XI
Katsue Akiba-Reynolds
Internal reconstruction in pre-Japanese syntax	1
Henrik Birnbaum
Notes on syntactic change: Cooccurrence vs. substitution stability vs. permeability	25
Andrei Danchev
Translation and syntactic change	47
Xavier Dekeyser
Relativizers in Early Modern English: A dynamic quantitative study . . .	61
Dorothy Disterheft
Irish complementation: A case study in two types of syntactic change	89
Marinel Gerritsen
Divergent word orderdevelopments in Germanic languages: A description and a tentative explanation	107
Hubert Haider and Ronald Zwanziger
Relatively attributive: The 'ezāfe'-construction from Old Iranian to Modern Persian	137
Eric P. Hamp
The reconstruction of particles and syntax	173
Martin B. Harris
On the strengths and weaknesses of a typological approach to historical syntax	183

Raymond Hickey	/
A valency framework for the Old English verb	199
David Huntley
The distribution of the denominative adjective and the adnominal genitive in Old Church Slavonic	217
Witold Mańczak
If I was instead of if I were	237
Hanne Martinet
Comment on W. Mańczak's paper	247
Lynell Marchese
Exbraciation in the Kru language family	249
Bruce Mitchell
The origin of Old English conjunctions: Some problems	271
Marianne Mithun
Levels of linguistic structure and the rate of change	301
Pamela Munro
Auxiliaries and auxiliarization in Western Muskogean	333
Ruta Nagucka
Explorations into syntactic obsolescence: English a-X-ing and X-ing . . .	363
Herbert Pilch
Syntactic reconstruction.	383
Paolo Ramat
"Es war ein König in Thule (. . .), Dem sterbend seine Buhle . . .": On the rise and transformation(s) of morphosyntactic categories	393
Matti Rissanen
The choice of relative pronouns in 17th century American English	417
Suzanne Romaine
Towards a typology of relative clause formation strategies in Ger- manic	437
Blair Rudes
Reconstructing word order in a polysynthetic language: From SOV to SVO in Iroquoian	471

Mats Rydén
The study of eighteenth century English syntax	509
Ariane von See Franz-Montag
‘Subjectless’ constructions and syntactic change	521
Carmen Silva-Corvalán
Semantic and pragmatic factors in syntactic change	555
Robert P. Stockwell
On the history of the verb-second rule in English	575
Theo Vennemann
Typology, universals and change of language	593
Werner Winter
Reconstructing comparative linguistics and the reconstruction of the syntax of undocumented stages in the development of languages and language families	613
Theo Vennemann
Verb-second, verb late, and the brace construction in Germanic: A dis- cussion	627