

Introduction
1.0. Overview	1
1.1. Productivity and blocking	3
1.2. Possible words versus acceptable words	7
1.3. Inflection and derivation	12
Redundancy in the lexicon
2.0. Introduction	15
2.1. Simplicity and redundancy	16
2.2. The morpheme-based model	21
2.2.1. Mechanics of the morpheme-based model	21
2.2.2. Morphemes and the evaluation metric	23
2.2.3. The definition of the morpheme	25
2.3. Idiosyncratic properties of words	30
2.3.1. Proposals for handling idiosyncrasies	31
2.3.2. Idiosyncrasies of distribution	34
2.4. The word-based model	39
2.4.1. Mechanics of the word-based model	39
2.4.2. The approaches to the lexicon contrasted	43
2.4.3. The measurement of regularity	48
2.4.4. Mismatching	49
2.5. Remarks on lexical representations	58
2.5.1. Listing of predictable words	58
2.5.2. Compromise models	61
2.5.3. A preliminary note on the status of morphemes	62
Patterns in the rule system
3.0. Introduction	65
3.1. Cumulative-pattern formation	66
3.2. Subset matching in the lexicon	75
3.2.1. Word isolates	75
3.2.2. Subsets of cumulative patterns	78
3.2.3. Implied patterns	80
3.3. Subset rules: subset matching applied to the rule system	87
3.3.1. The -abil-ity rule	88
3.3.2. *abil-ity	93

3.4.	Subrules: subsets with variable substitution	97
3.4.1.	Proper subrules and comparative -er	98
3.4.2.	Improper subrules, and the truncation of -ous	102
3.4.3.	The subrules of -ion	108
3.4.4.	The parallelism between -ion nouns and -ive adjectives	113
Paradigms and related patterns
4.0.	Introduction	119
4.1.	Paradigms as patterns with more than two elements	120
4.2.	Passamaquoddy possessed forms	134
4.3.	Prefix+root+ion nouns	142
4.3.1.	Prefix+root+ion nouns as a paradigmatic structure	144
4.3.2.	Semantics	149
4.3.3.	Latinate roots and the distribution of -ion	153
4.3.4.	Allomorphy and mismatching	162
4.3.5.	Irregular back-formations	166
4.3.6.	Summary	170
Alternations in phonological form
5.0.	Introduction	171
5.1.	Morphological and phonological alternations	172
5.2.	Alternations with multiple contexts	183
5.3.	Paradigm levelling	188
5.4.	Alternations and derived environments	195
5.5.	Allomorphy and cyclicity	199
Against level-ordering and lexical phonology
6.0.	Introduction	203
6.1.	The historical perspective	205
6.2.	#abil+ity	210
6.3.	Bracketing paradoxes and blends	211
6.4.	Lexical phonological phenomena	220
Summary
7.1.	Restrictiveness of theories	227
7.2.	On rejecting the morpheme	230
7.3.	Overview	231
Notes		233
References		239
Index		245