

CONTENTS

Preface	xi
Part I: The phonology of nasal vowels	1
Introduction	3
I: The standard generative analysis	6
I.1. Basic claims	6
I.2. Basic motivations	7
I.3. Proposed formalizations	9
I.3.1. Schane (1968a)	10
I.3.2. Schane (1973b)	10
I.3.3. Dell (1970, 1973c)	11
I.3.4. Selkirk (1972)	12
I.4. Summary	13
II: Critical review of the standard generative analysis	14
II.1. Introduction	14
II.2. On the source of nonalternating nasal vowels	15
II.2.1. Introduction	15
II.2.2. Critical review of the evidence	16
II.2.2.1. The simplicity argument	16
II.2.2.2. The sibilant-voicing argument	20
II.2.2.3. The slow-speech argument	27
II.2.2.4. The surface structure constraint arguments	32
II.2.3. Conclusion	36
II.3. On artificial difficulties in the abstract generative analysis	36
II.3.1. Introduction	36
II.3.2. The nonuniqueness of phonological representations	37
II.3.3. The interaction of vowel nasalization and liaison	40
II.3.3.1. Dell's account	41
II.3.3.2. Schane's account	51
II.3.3.3. Vowel nasalization and liaison: conclusion	54
II.3.4. Conclusion	54

II.4. On the descriptive inadequacy of vowel nasalization	55
II.4.1. Introduction	55
II.4.2. The generation of nasal vowels	55
II.4.3. The generation of [VN] sequences	56
II.4.3.1. Vowel nasalization within morphemes	57
II.4.3.2. Vowel nasalization across morphemes (within words)	60
A. The prefix in- /in/	60
B. The prefix circum- /sirkəm/	64
C. The conditional	64
D. Conclusion	66
II.4.3.3. Vowel nasalization at the end of words	67
II.4.4. Conclusion	70
II.5. Summary	70
III: An alternative analysis	71
III.1. Introduction	71
III.2. Nonalternating nasal vowels	71
III.2.1. Implications	72
III.2.2. Mon -type words, the article un , and the prefixes bien- , en- , non-	73
III.2.3. Morpheme structure constraints	76
III.3. Nonalternating [VN] sequences	77
III.3.1. Nonalternating [VN] sequences within morphemes . .	78
III.3.2. Nonalternating [VN] sequences across morphemes (within words)	80
III.3.3. Nonalternating [VN] sequences at the end of words .	84
III.4. Conclusion	84
III.5. [V̄] ~ [VN] alternations	85
III.5.1. Introduction	85
III.5.2. Phonological denasalization	87
III.5.3. Nonuniform treatment	90
III.5.3.1. Derivational morphology	91
III.5.3.2. Third-conjugation verbs	97
III.5.3.3. Gender and liaison alternations	100
A. Morphophonological vowel nasalization	100
B. Problems with morphophonological vowel nasalization	104
C. Suggestions	109
D. The questions of the oral vowel and of the nasal consonant	111

E. A concrete analysis.....	117
III.6. Summary	121
IV: Nasal vowels and liaison: diachronic and dialectal perspectives	122
IV.1. Introduction	122
IV.2. Diachronic and dialectal information	122
IV.2.1. Preliminaries	122
IV.2.2. Survey	124
A. Sixteenth century	124
B. Seventeenth century	125
C. Eighteenth century.....	128
D. Nineteenth century.....	133
E. Twentieth century	140
IV.2.3. Summary.....	146
IV.3. Explanations and implications	147
 Part II: Final consonants	157
Introduction	159
V: The standard generative analysis	165
V.1. Basic claims	165
V.2. Basic motivation	166
V.3. Formalizations	167
V.3.1. The formalization of the process of consonant deletion	167
V.3.1.1. Schane (1968a).....	167
V.3.1.2. Schane (1974)	168
V.3.1.3. Dell (1970)	168
V.3.1.4. Dell (1973b)	169
V.3.1.5. Selkirk (1972)	170
V.3.2. The role of syntactic structure in liaison	171
V.3.3. Pronounced final consonants	175
V.4. Summary	178
VI: Plural marking and liaison	179
VI.1. Introduction	179
VI.2. Motivations for the systematic plural-suffix hypothesis ..	180
VI.2.1. Liaison.....	181
VI.2.2. Singular/plural [al] ~ [o] alternations	182
VI.2.3. Singular/plural alternations of the type oeuf [œf]/ oeufs [ø]	183

VI.2.4. Conclusion	184
VI.3. Arguments against the systematic plural-suffix hypothesis	184
VI.3.1. The [al] ~ [o] alternation	185
VI.3.2. Exceptions to final-consonant deletion	191
VI.3.3. Liaison	192
VI.3.3.1. The restoration of final consonants	192
A. The cases of cinq and other cardinal numbers	192
B. The cases of boeufs , oeufs , and os	195
C. The cases of optional final consonants	195
D. Consonantal regressions	196
VI.3.3.2. New final consonants	197
VI.3.3.3. New words	197
VI.3.3.4. Prefixes	199
VI.3.3.5. The conditional	201
VI.3.3.6. On the determination and treatment of exceptions	201
VI.3.3.7. Summary	203
VI.3.3.8. On the generalizations allowed by consonant deletion	203
A. Inflectional morphology	204
B. Derivational morphology	206
C. Liaison	209
VI.3.3.9. Conclusion on consonant deletion	209
VI.3.4. Conclusion on the systematic plural-suffix hypothesis	210
VI.4. The plural /z/-insertion analysis	210
VI.4.1. Positive evidence	210
VI.4.1.1. Direct mapping	211
VI.4.1.2. Plural /z/ as a connective morpheme	211
VI.4.1.3. On the pronunciation of oeufs	212
VI.4.1.4. Plural marking and cardinal numbers	214
VI.4.2. On the formulation and application of the plural /z/-insertion process	217
VII: A treatment of [Ø] ~ [C] alternations	222
VII.1. Introduction	222
VII.2. Liaison	223
VII.2.1. Verb liaison	223
VII.2.1.1. Optional verb liaison with person endings	223
VII.2.1.2. Obligatory verb liaison with person endings	230

VII.2.1.3. Generalizing the rules	234
VII.2.1.4. Infinitive liaison	234
VII.2.2. Adjective liaison	235
VII.2.3. Liaison with invariable words	239
VII.2.3.1. Formal proposal	240
VII.2.3.2. Justification of the analysis	241
VII.2.3.3. Apparent exceptions	246
VII.3. Remaining [Ø] ~ [C] alternations	248
VII.3.1. Verb-stem alternations	248
VII.3.2. Masculine/feminine alternations	251
VII.3.2.1. On the predictability of gender consonants	251
VII.3.2.2. Justification of the insertion analysis	266
VII.3.2.3. Summary	272
VII.3.3. Derivational morphology alternations	272
VII.4. Conclusion	275
 Part III: Protective schwas and h-aspiré words	277
Introduction	279
1. A note on terminology	279
2. Purpose	280
VIII: Protective schwas	282
VIII.1. Introduction	282
VIII.2. On the phonetic evidence for protective schwas	286
VIII.2.1. Schwa and h-aspiré words	286
VIII.2.2. Schwa and consonant clusters	288
VIII.2.3. Schwa and rien	290
VIII.2.4. Schwa and other dialects	291
VIII.2.5. Schwa in songs and poetry	292
VIII.2.6. Schwa and slow speech	292
VIII.2.7. Conclusion	293
VIII.3. On the structural evidence for protective schwas	293
VIII.4. Protective schwas and learnability	293
VIII.5. Conclusion	294
IX: H-aspiré words	295
IX.1. Introduction	295
IX.2. H-aspiré words and elision, liaison, and suppletion	295
IX.3. H-aspiré words and optional schwa deletion	303
IX.4. H-aspiré words and enchaînement	305
IX.5. H-aspiré words and final schwas	306

x ■ CONTENTS

IX.6. H-aspiré words and liquid deletion	308
IX.7. H-aspiré words and glottal stops	310
IX.8. H-aspiré words and deletable final consonants	311
IX.9. Conclusion	314
References	315