

CONTENTS

Editor's introduction	VII
Larry Selinker, CA/EA/IL: The earliest experimental record	1
S. Pit Corder, The significance of learners' errors	27
→ Libuše Dušková, On sources of error in foreign language learning	37
Gerhard Nickel, Problems of learners' difficulties in foreign language acquisition	63
X Tran-Thi-Chau, Error analysis, contrastive analysis and students' perception: A study of difficulty in second language learning	73
Katri Meriö, The psycholinguistic analysis and measurement of interference errors	101
X Michael D. Morrissey, Toward a grammar of learners' errors	119
X Gerhard Nickel, Some controversies in present-day error analysis: 'Contrastive' vs. 'Non-contrastive' errors	135
X Gerry Abbott, Toward a more rigorous analysis of foreign language errors	149
Ely J. Marquez, Contrastive analysis and sociolinguistics	163
Rei R. Noguchi, The dynamics of rule conflict in English and Japanese conversation	181
Hideyuki Takashima, How Japanese learners of English answer yes-no questions: A case of language transfer	191
Original publication references	203