Preface to the third edition	V
0 Introduction: What is linguistics?	VI
1 The core area of linguistics: grammar	1
1.1 Grammar in general	1
1.1.1 What kind of thing is grammar?	1
1.1.1.1 Grammar as knowledge	1
1.1.1.2 Grammar as a societal phenomenon	3
1.1.1.3 Discourse as a window to grammar	3
1.1.1.4 Written grammars	6
1.1.1.5 Summary.....	7
1.1.2 Subdivisions of grammar and the notion of word	9
1.1.3 General concepts of grammar	14
1.1.3.1 Word classes.....	14
1.1.3.2 Grammatical categories of the noun	18
1.1.3.3 Comparison of adjectives.....	20
1.1.3.4 Verbal categories	21
1.2 Syntax.....	29
1.2.1 Traditional structural categories in the sentence.....	29
1.2.1.1 The notion of valency	29
1.2.1.2 Syntactic functions: subject and object, adverbial and complement.....	31
1.2.1.3 Compound and complex sentences	35
1.2.2 Generative Grammar: the description of constituent structure	38
1.2.2.1 Requirements on a syntactic description.....	38
1.2.2.2 The major constituents of an English sentence. Heuristic tests	40
1.2.2.3 Types of phrases in the English sentence.....	45
1.2.2.4 Structure within constituents: Head and modifier.....	47
1.2.2.5 Resolving syntactic ambiguity.....	48
1.2.2.6 Thematic roles	49
1.2.2.7 Formal vs. functional approaches in syntax.....	51
1.2.3 Construction Grammar.....	52
1.2.3.1 Historical background.....	52
1.2.3.2 The notion of construction.....	53
1.2.3.3 A 'classical' example: the let alone construction	61
1.2.3.4 Generative vs. Construction Grammar.....	63
1.3 Morphology	64
1.3.1 Why morphology?	64
1.3.2 Morphemes	65
1.3.3 Allomorphs and morphological processes	67

1.3.4	Inflection vs. derivation	69
1.3.5	Further strategies of word-formation	72
1.3.6	Productivity in morphology	78
1.3.7	Summary	79
1.4	Language typology	80
2	Phonetics and Phonology	86
2.0	A brief note on phonetic transcription	86
2.1	Phonetics	86
2.1.1	Articulatory phonetics	86
2.1.1.1	Vowels: Types of vowels. Parameters of vowel description	88
2.1.1.2	Consonants	97
2.1.1.3	Approximants / Glides / Semi-vowels	101
2.1.2	Acoustic phonetics	102
2.1.3	Auditory phonetics	104
2.2	Segmental phonology	105
2.2.1	Phonetics vs. phonology. The phoneme	105
2.2.2	Phonemic and phonetic transcription	107
2.2.3	Phoneme vs. allophone	109
2.2.4	Neutralisation	116
2.2.5	Distinctive features	117
2.2.6	Morphophonology	117
2.3	Suprasegmental phonology	119
2.3.1	Phonotactics	119
2.3.2	Syllables	119
2.3.3	Word stress	121
2.3.4	Intonation	123
2.4	The phonetics and phonology of connected speech	127
2.4.1	Weak forms	128
2.4.2	Assimilation	130
2.4.3	Linking /r/ and intrusive /r/	131
2.5	Writing	132
3	Language change in progress	135
3.1	What kinds of language change are there?	135
3.2	Grammaticalisation	136
3.3	Lexical change	138
3.4	Sociolinguistic change	142
3.5	Why do languages change?	143
4	Semantics	145
4.0	What is semantics?	145
4.1	General key concepts of semantics	146
4.1.1	Reference and sense and related dichotomies	146

4.1.2	Ambiguity, homonymy and polysemy; metonymy and metaphor; vagueness	148
4.1.2.1	Two kinds of ambiguity: homonymy and polysemy.....	148
4.1.2.2	Metonymy and metaphor	151
4.1.2.3	Vagueness	152
4.2	Structural semantics: semantic fields, sense relations and componential analysis	152
4.2.1	Semantic fields.....	153
4.2.2	Sense relations	155
4.2.2.1	Synonymy	155
4.2.2.2	Hyponymy	156
4.2.2.3	Partitive relations	157
4.2.2.4	Antonymy	157
4.2.3	Componential analysis: the semantic feature approach	158
4.3	Semantic primitives	160
4.4	Cognitive semantics.....	161
4.4.1	Central tenets of cognitive semantics	161
4.4.2	Prototypes	163
4.4.3	Frames.....	165
4.5	Formal semantics.....	168
4.5.1	Truth values and truth conditions	168
4.5.2	Logical connectives	169
4.5.3	Logical relations between propositions	173
4.5.3.1	Entailment.....	173
4.5.3.2	Paraphrase.....	174
4.5.3.3	Presupposition	175
4.5.4	Logical properties of propositions	178
4.5.4.1	Contradiction	178
4.5.4.2	Tautology.....	178
4.5.4.3	Anomaly	178
4.5.5	Predicate logic.....	179
4.5.5.1	Simple statements	179
4.5.5.2	Quantification	180
4.5.5.3	Logical aspects of lexical decomposition	184
4.5.6	Other issues in formal semantics	186
5	Pragmatics: the context of language use	187
5.1	Illocution.....	189
5.2	Conversational maxims	193
5.3	Relevance theory	196
5.4	The notion of context.....	197
6	Textlinguistics. Conversation analysis. Discourse analysis	200
6.1	Textlinguistic approaches to text analysis	200

6.1.1	Grammar beyond the sentence: cohesion phenomena	201
6.1.2	Cohesion as text constitution	203
6.1.3	Thematic progression.....	205
6.1.4	Coherence relations.....	207
6.2	The analysis of conversation	210
6.3	Discourse in the technical age	211
6.3.1	The oral – written dichotomy.....	211
6.3.2	Media discourse	216
7	Sociolinguistics	217
7.0	The realm of sociolinguistics.....	217
7.1	Dialect, sociolect, and the standard	218
7.1.1	Dialect vs. language and accent.....	218
7.1.2	Sociolect	223
7.1.3	The standard.....	225
7.2	Languages in contact	227
7.2.1	Minority vs. majority	227
7.2.2	Bi- and multilingualism	228
7.2.3	Language policy.....	231
7.3	English as a world language	233
7.4	Pidgins and creoles.....	237
7.4.1	Pidgins	238
7.4.2	Creoles	239
7.5	Language and gender.....	241
7.6	On variation and conditioning factors of its use.....	246
8	Psycholinguistics. Neurolinguistics. Bilingualistics	248
8.1	Psycholinguistics	248
8.1.1	Language acquisition	248
8.1.2	Speech perception / language comprehension	252
8.1.3	Speech production	254
8.1.4	Reading / writing	256
8.1.5	Sign language.....	258
8.2	Neurolinguistics. Speech pathology	260
8.3	Bilingualistics.....	262
8.3.1	Biological prerequisites of speech	262
8.3.2	Specific characteristics of human languages vs. animal communication	262
8.3.2.1	Arbitrariness	263
8.3.2.2	Duality / double articulation	264
8.3.2.3	Displacement	265
8.3.2.4	Creativity / productivity and recursiveness.....	265
8.3.3	Can animals learn human language?	266

9 Exercises	268
9.1 Exercises relating to chapter 1	268
9.1.1 Grammar in general	268
9.1.2 Syntax	268
9.1.3 Morphology	269
9.2 Exercises relating to chapter 2	270
9.3 Exercises relating to chapter 3	271
9.4 Exercises relating to chapter 4	272
9.5 Exercises relating to chapter 5	273
9.6 Exercises relating to chapter 6	275
9.7 Exercises relating to chapter 7	276
9.8 Exercises relating to chapter 8	277
10 Bibliographical section	278
10.0 Some useful links for linguists	278
10.0.0 General sources	278
10.0.1 Grammar	278
10.0.2 Phonetics and phonology	279
10.0.3 Lexicology and semantics	279
10.0.4 Sociolinguistics	279
10.0.5 Psycholinguistics	279
10.0.6 Corpus linguistics	279
10.1 Important basic literature	280
10.1.0 General literature	280
10.1.0.1 Bibliographies	280
10.1.0.2 General readers	280
10.1.0.3 Reference works	280
10.1.0.4 Basic theoretical literature / Classics of linguistics	281
10.1.0.5 General introductions	282
10.1.0.6 Schools of linguistics	283
10.1.0.7 Exercises	283
10.1.1 Grammar	283
10.1.1.1 Grammars of Modern English	283
10.1.1.2 Syntax	284
10.1.1.3 Morphology	285
10.1.1.4 Typology and universals	285
10.1.2 Phonetics and phonology. Graphemics	286
10.1.3 Language change	286
10.1.4 Lexicology and semantics	287
10.1.4.0 Dictionaries	287
10.1.4.1 Introductions to semantics	287
10.1.4.2 Structural semantics	288
10.1.4.3 Semantic primitives	288

10.1.4.4 Cognitive semantics	288
10.1.4.5 Formal semantics	289
10.1.5 Pragmatics	289
10.1.5.0 Theory / Introductions	289
10.1.5.1 Speech act theory	290
10.1.5.2 Conversational maxims.....	290
10.1.5.3 Discourse in the technical age.....	291
10.1.6 Sociolinguistics and dialectology	292
10.1.6.1 General	292
10.1.6.2 Dialects	293
10.1.6.3 Bilingualism.....	293
10.1.6.4 Varieties	293
10.1.6.5 Pidgins and creoles	293
10.1.6.6 Language and gender	294
10.1.7 Psycholinguistics. Neurolinguistics. Biolinguistics	294
10.1.7.1 Psycholinguistics	294
10.1.7.2 Neurolinguistics	295
10.1.7.3 Biolinguistics	296
10.2 Literature mentioned in the text	296
