

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	3
Part One: Seminal Essays
Ghoulies and Ghosties Curtis Harrington (1952)	9
Horror Films William K. Everson (1954)	21
The Subconscious: From Pleasure Castle to Libido Hotel Raymond Durnat (1958)	39
The Face of Horror Derek Hill (1958)	51
A Bloody New Wave in the United States Jean-Claude Romer (1964)	63
Horror Is My Business Terence Fisher (1964)	67
The Horror Film: Polanski and Repulsion Ivan Butler (1967)	77
From Voyeurism to Infinity Raymond Lefevre (1968)	87
Mario Bava: the Illusion of Reality Alain Silver and James Ursini (1975)	95
Part Two: New Perspectives
Neglected Nightmares Robin Wood	111

Is the Devil American? William Dieterle's The Devil and Daniel Webster Tony Williams	129
Violence, Women, and Disability in Tod Browning's Freaks and The Devil Doll Martin F. Norden and Madeleine Cahill	151
Monsters as (Uncanny) Metaphors: Freud, Lakoff, and the Representation of Monstrosity in Cinematic Horror Steven Schneider	167
The Anxiety of Influence: Georges Franju and the Medical Horror Shows of Jess Franco Joan Hawkins	193
Seducing the Subject: Freddy Krueger Ian Conrich	223
What Rough Beast? Insect Politics and The Fly Linda Brookover and Alain Silver	237
Demon Daddies: Gender, Ecstasy and Terror in the Possession Film Tanya Krzywinska	247
Women on the Verge of a Gothic Breakdown: Sex, Drugs and Corpses in The Horrible Dr. Hichcock Glenn Erickson	269
Candyman : Urban Space, Fear, and Entitlement Aviva Briefel and Sianne Ngai	281
The Haunting and the Power of Suggestion: Why Robert Wise's Film Continues to "Deliver the Goods" to Modern Audiences Pam Keeseey	305
Notes on Contributors	317