

Table of contents

Preface	vii
Part I. Introduction
Introduction. Datives: Structural vs. inherent – abstract vs. morphological – autonomous vs. combinatory – universally vs. language-specifically configured? Werner Abraham	3
Part II. Focus on Germanic
German inherent datives and argument structure Thomas McFadden	49
Remarks on the projection of dative arguments in German André Meinunger	79
Receiving and perceiving datives (cipients) – A view from German Patrick Brandt	103
The datives that aren't born equal: Beneficiaries and the dative passive Philippa Cook	141
The interpretation of German datives and English have Andrew McIntyre	185
Dative and indirect object in German dialects: Evidence from relative clauses Jürg Fleischer	213
Indirect objects and dative case in monolingual German and bilingual German/Romance language acquisition Katrin Schmitz	239
Part III. Beyond Germanic: From Albanian to Tagalog
Unaccusatives with dative causers and experiencers: A unified account Dalina Kallulli	271

Putting things into perspective: The function of the dative in adjectival constructions in Serbian	301
Jelena Krivokapić
Widening the perspective: Argumenthood and syntax in Chinese, Japanese and Tagalog	331
Walter Bisang
Index	383