

Contents

Acknowledgements	ix
Introduction	1
1 Familiar Extremes: The Case of Sir John Oldcastle	11
What Eating Too Much Meant to the Elizabethans	12
Shakespeare's Belly God: 1 Henry 4	18
Foins to Sir John: 2 Henry 4	23
The Gaping Grave	29
2 Celtic Acquaintance and Alterity	37
Henry 5 : Figs and Leeks	37
Macbeth and Poisoned Nutrients	44
3 Strange Diets: Vegetarianism and the Melancholic	57
As You Like It	57
The Vegetarian Option	58
Melancholy and Diet	61
A Christian Golden World	63
The Winter's Tale	67
Leontes's Condition	68
"Exit, pursued by a bear"	72
Vegetarian Feasts	76
4 Famine and Abstinence, Class War, and Foreign Foodstuff	81
Sir Thomas More	83
Close to Home: Dirt, Cannibalism, and the Stereotypes of Ireland	89
Coriolanus	93
Pericles	99
5 Beyond the Pale: Profane Consumption	105
Hamlet	105
Timon of Athens	113
Titus Andronicus	119

viii

Food in Shakespeare

Conclusion

127

Notes

131

Works Cited

139

Index

155