

Table of contents

Contributors	VII
Introduction to the volume Michael Bamberg, Anna De Fina, and Deborah Schiffrin	1
“Goblins like to hear stories”: Miskitu children’s narratives of spirit encounters Amanda Minks	9
Storying as becoming: Identity through the telling of conversion Cecilia Castillo Ayometzi	41
Language and identity in discourse in the American South: Sociolinguistic repertoire as expressive resource in the presentation of self Catherine Evans Davies	71
Doing “being ordinary” in an interview narrative with a second generation Italian-Australian woman Isabella Paoletti, and Greer Cavallaro Johnson	89
“Moral versions” of motherhood and daughterhood in Greek-Australian family narratives Eleni Petraki, Carolyn Baker, and Michael Emmison	107
Repetition and identity experimentation: One child’s use of repetition as a resource for “trying on” maternal identities Cynthia Gordon	133
I beat them all up: Self-representation in young children’s personal narratives Richard Ely, Robin Abrahams, Ann MacGibbon, and Allyssa McCabe	159
Multiple selves and thematic domains in gender identity: Perspectives from Chinese children’s conflict management styles Jiansheng Guo	181

“Mr. Lanoe hit on my mom”: Reestablishment of believability in sequential ‘small stories’ by adolescent boys Luke Moissinac	229
“Strip poker! They don’t show nothing!”: Positioning identities in adolescent male talk about a television game show Neill Korobov, and Michael Bamberg	253
Using the other for oneself: Conversational practices of representing out-group members among adolescents Arnulf Deppermann	273
Like pieces in a puzzle: Working with layered methods of reading personal narratives Lynn Sorsoli	303
Theories of self in psychotherapeutic narratives Alessandra Fasulo	325
Index	351