Contents

Preface vii

I WHAT IS SOCIAL THEORY?
Total Destruction, Bead Lust, and
Other Unreasonable Social Things

1 The Impossible Reasons of Modern Civilizations 3
2 Social Theory and Modernity's Unthinkable 17
3 Social Violence as the Bead Lust of the Unthinkable 26
4 Five Ways to Skin a Cat: Modernity's Five Riddles 34

II UNTHINKABLE SOCIAL THINGS
Five Solutions to the Riddle of the Defiant Darkness, 1848-1914

Light and Dark 43
5 Revolutionary Reasons: Karl Marx and the Melting of Solid Modernity 47
6 Rationality's Double-Bind: Max Weber and Modernity's
Threat to the Human Spirit 61
7 The Reasonable Hope of a Social Bond: Émile Durkheim and Modern Man's Trouble with Conflict 77

Riddles and Realities 97
8 Perverse Reasons: Sigmund Freud and the Discontents of Conscious Life 102
9 Unreasonable Differences: Charlotte Perkins Gilman and the Logic of the Feminist Standpoint 110
III THE EXILED OTHERS THINK THE UNTINKABLE
The Classic Solutions Encounter
Differences and Possibilities

Unthinkable Variations on the Classic Riddles:
W. E. B. Du Bois, Anna Julia Cooper, Georg Simmel, and Ferdinand de Saussure

10 Beyond the Double-Bind: W. E. B. Du Bois and the Gift of Second-Sight
11 A Revolutionary Social Bond: Anna Julia Cooper
and the Colored Woman's Office
12 The Strange Social Benefits of Conflict: Georg Simmel and Modern Wandering
13 The Social Structure of Meanings: Ferdinand de Saussure and the Arbitrary Sign

Violence, War, and the Short Twentieth Century, 1914–1991

14 The Unfolding of Social Theory in the Unraveling of the Twentieth Century into the Twenty-First

Bibliographic Essay and Other Acknowledgments
Index
About the Author