

CONTENTS

List of Tables and Figures	viii
List of Boxes	x
Acknowledgements	xi
1 Introduction: what is game studies?	1
Making sense of games	1
A (very) short history of game studies	5
Summary and conclusions	11
Suggested further reading	11
Orientation assignment: Personal game history	11
Notes	12
2 Game culture: meaning in games	13
Games as cultural systems	13
Game cultures as subcultures	21
Summary and conclusions	27
Suggested further reading	28
Assignment: Game culture survey	28
3 Play and games in history	30
Writing for game history	30
Defining games	32
Prehistory of games	37
Study of play in culture	43
Summary and conclusions	50
Suggested further reading	50
Assignment: Remediation of a non-digital game	50
4 Dual structure and the action games of the 1970s	52
Digital games as multi-layered meaning-making systems	52
How to define a 'classic'?	55
Three decades of digital games: The rise of modern information society	56

Games in the 1970s: Learning the lexicon	58
Pong (1972): Introducing enjoyable core gameplay	58
Significance in gaming devices	61
Space invaders (1978) and the playability of a shooter	62
Summary and conclusions	65
Suggested further reading	66
Assignments on early digital games	66
5 Adventures and other fiction in the 1980s' games	68
Games and culture in the 1980s	68
Pac-Man (1980) and digital game as pop culture	68
Donkey Kong (1981), the rise of interactive story-worlds	73
Text adventures and the evolution of computer role-playing games	78
Ultima IV: Quest of the Avatar (1985) and games' thematic depth	81
Summary and conclusions	86
Suggested further reading	87
Assignments on diversifying game cultures	87
Notes	89
6 Three-dimensionality and the early 1990s	90
Debating games in the 1990s	90
Meaningful audiovisual technology?	91
Civilization (1991): Ideological simulation or just strategic play?	95
Doom (1993): Controversy, immersion and player-created mod culture	101
Summary and conclusions	115
Suggested further reading	116
Assignments on 3D and turn-taking	116
7 The real and the game: game culture entering the new millennium	118
Games as worlds, the world as a game	118
The growth of online games	119
EverQuest (1999) World of Warcraft (2004) and other virtual worlds	127
Multimodal and pervasive games	141
Summary and conclusions	150
Suggested further reading	151
Assignments on mixed reality and multiplayer games	151

8 Preparing for a game studies project	152
Learning to ask	152
Selecting and building the toolbox of methods	155
Humanities methods	157
Social sciences methods	158
Design research methods	162
Game playing as a method	165
Writing for an audience	167
References	171
Index	184

LIST OF TABLES AND FIGURES

TABLES

5.1	All-time top twenty games by sales	77
5.2	Four game categories as a matrix between the temporality of interaction and the randomness of game world	80
5.3	The Ultima IV virtues, character classes and starting towns	83
7.1	Available subscription data for twenty popular online game worlds	134
7.2	Ten different player perceptions of RMT [real money trade]	140
8.1	Selected titles of papers presented in Chancing Views – Worlds in Play	155

FIGURES

1.1	The focus of game studies in the interaction between game and player	2
2.1	Screenshot from Breakout	15
2.2	The dialectic of core and shell, or gameplay and representation in the basic structure of games	18
3.1	Primary Schemas	37
3.2	Tic-Tac-Toe , created by A. S. Douglas, 1952	40
3.3	Tennis for Two – a screenshot and a controller	41
3.4	The seven interlocking spheres of performance	46
4.1	Pong cabinet and an in-game screenshot	60
4.2	Space Invaders arcade console, set of instructions, and a screenshot with overlay colour effects	63
5.1	Pac-Man arcade console and screenshots	71
5.2	Donkey Kong console and screenshots	74
5.3	Sample screen elements from Roguelike games	79
5.4	Screenshots from Ultima IV , taken from the Commodore 64 version	83
5.5	A cloth map of Britannia	88
6.1	Commodore 64 and Nintendo Gameboy	92
6.2	A collection of Civilization screenshots from different phrases of the game	97

6.3	A collection of screenshots from Doom	103
6.4	Changes in the design of game level 'Episode 1, Map 4' from Doom	106
6.5	(a) Screenshot from the original Tomb Raider game and (b) image of Lara from Tomb Raider: Legend production	107
6.6	Gameplay experience model with three types of immersion	110
6.7	(a) Screenshot from 'Castle Smurfenstein' mod (1981) and (b) screenshot from Counter-Strike (1991)	113
7.1	(a) Screenshot from Meridian 59 (b) Screenshot from EverQuest (c & d) Screenshots from World of Warcraft	131
7.2	(a) Foot Craz pad for Atari 2600 (b) EyeToy camera (c) DDR dance game players (d) Guitar Hero package	144
8.1	Hermeneutic circle as a spiralling process of inquiry	153

LIST OF BOXES

1.1	Game studies resources online	5
1.2	On hypertext, cybertext, and interactive fiction	9
2.1	What is gameplay?	16
2.2	On subcultures	26
4.1	On the history of digital games	55
4.2	On the history of game controllers	62
6.1	On understanding and analysing game spaces	102
7.1	On new games movement	149