

contents

acknowledgements vii

contributors viii

introduction

graham saunders 1

part i in-yer-face theatre: a reconsideration

introduction to part i 19

1. 'we all need stories': the politics of in-yer-face theatre

aleks sierz 23

2. cruel britannia

ken urban 38

3. harold pinter and poetic politics

mary luckhurst 56

part ii thatcherism and (post-)feminism

introduction to part ii 71

4. thatcher's children: alienation and anomie
in the plays of judy upton

rebecca d'monté 79

5. middle-class aspirations and black women's mental (ill) health in zindika's leonora's dance, and bonnie greer's munda negra and dancing on blackwater

lynette goddard 96

6. a good night out, for the girls elaine aston 114

part iii nation, devolution and globalization

introduction to part iii 133

7. 'mapping the territory': modern scottish drama david pattie 143
8. 'the net and the self': colliding views of individuality and nationhood in the pre-devolutionary plays of mark jenkins and ed thomas roger owen 158
9. a legacy of violence: representing loyalism in the plays of gary mitchell nadine holdsworth and wallace mcdowell 176
10. 'because it feels fucking amazing':
recent british drama and bodily mutilation dan rebellato 192
11. rough theatre
david greig 208
- bibliography* 222
- index* 239