

Contents

Preface	vii
Introduction	1
1 The case for computers in primary schools	11
From book to computer. The need for educational value. The main uses of a computer in school. Computer literacy.
2 Introducing a computer into a school	21
Discussion and planning. What system should a school have? Help from outside agencies.
3 The computer in school	35
Planning for the school. Time sharing. Introducing the children to a computer. Work cards. Computer appreciation. Computer applications. Computer technology. Programming. The individual classroom. What does a teacher need to know? Classroom management. Why use a computer?

4	The computer and the curriculum	51
	Keyboard skills. Motor co-ordination. Control. Variety of presentation. Co-operative work. Concentration span. Immediacy. Types of program. Programs and the curriculum.
5	Programs in the curriculum	69
	Sources of programs. Art. English. Foreign languages. Geography. History. Mathematics. Reading skills. Science. Cross curriculum.
6	Care and maintenance	81
	Insurance. Service agreements. Cleaning. Care of tapes and discs. Storage. Cataloguing. The care of programs. Documentation. Technical documentation. Standardisation of programs. Copying programs. Machine code.
7	Uses in administration	99
	Personnel. Efficiency. Equipment. Confidentiality. Computer lists. Library lists. Timetables. Stock control and accounting. School work records. Word processing.
Appendices
	Appendix A Electronic learning aids and small computers	113
	Appendix B Logo, Turtle and the BBC Buggy	123
	Appendix C Micros in Primary Schools-the Department of Industry scheme	129
	Appendix D Micro-electronics in Education Programme (MEP) address list	143
	Glossary	147
	Index	151