

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments	vii
Māori Terms	viii
Introduction	x
1 Reviewing the Past, Rethinking the Present	1
Reviewing history	1
Casting the foundation: Te Tiriti o Waitangi	5
Putting the Treaty to work: the Waitangi Tribunal	18
Tino rangatiratanga: contesting the Treaty	22
Tino rangatiratanga in practice: kura kaupapa Māori	31
Recommended reading	38
2 Indigeneity and Sovereignty: Cultural Politics in Aotearoa	39
Introduction: sites of struggle	39
Sovereignty discourses in Aotearoa	41
Debating sovereignty	47
Indigeneity as sovereignty: resistance and transformation	56
From Māoriland to Aotearoa: indigeneity and identity in New Zealand film	65
Re-casting Aotearoa	72
Māori nationalism and society-building: conflict or creative tension?	74
Towards a post-sovereign society	77
Recommended reading	78
3 The Cultural Politics of Post-colonialism: Being Pākehā	80
The ethnicity of majority groups	81
Contesting colonialism	85
The sociology of Pākehā	89
Post-colonialism	93
Being Pākehā and post-colonial	98
Colonialism versus post-colonialism: the cultural safety debate	99
Conclusion	103
Recommended reading	106
4 Māori Policy: Reconstructing a Relationship	107
Framing state policy: sites of struggle	107
Māori affairs policy	110
The Department of Māori Affairs: friend or foe?	116
Re-calibrating the relation: Treaty settlements	131

Settling claims: the case of Ngai Tahu	133
Constructive engagement: he putahitanga—a true partnership	144
Rethinking Māori policy	147
Recommended reading	149
5 New Zealand Immigration: National Identity, Social Cohesion, and ‘Race’ Relations	150
The crisis in national identity	150
Historical trends/contemporary patterns	154
‘Yellow peril’ or White xenophobia	156
Current immigration policy	164
Costs and benefits of immigration	171
Public reaction and immigrant response	175
Debunking immigration myths	176
Is New Zealand a racist society?	180
Immigrants and Aotearoa	188
Recommended reading	189
6 Tagata Pasifika: No Longer Migrants	190
Colonial responsibilities: New Zealand’s early links with the Pacific	192
Labour migration: Tagata Pasifika migrate to New Zealand	194
Racism: unwanted immigrants	197
Negotiating citizenship: the Lesa case	199
Socio-economic characteristics of Tagata Pasifika communities in Aotearoa/New Zealand	201
Tagata Pasifika in Aotearoa: new experiences and identities	208
Conclusion	216
Recommended reading	217
7 Engaging with Diversity: Cultural Politics in Aotearoa	218
Introduction: cultural politics and tensions	218
Multiculturalism: from managing diversity to engaging differences	221
Multiculturalisms in Canada and the USA	224
The politics of engagement in Aotearoa	232
The ethnic composition of New Zealand	234
Biculturalism: double-edged and ‘multicultured’	236
Bi-nationalism: re-priming the partnership	240
The case for collective rights: multicultural and bi-national perspectives	241
Towards a multiculturalism within a bi-national framework	248
Recommended reading	250
A Conclusion: Recalling Aotearoa	251
Bibliography	255
Index	281