

Contents

Acknowledgements page x

Chapter 1 Introduction

1.1	What this book is about	1
1.2	Some practicalities: how to use this book	2
1.3	Reading and writing in your life	6
1.4	A very brief history of writing and reading	9
1.5	What do novels know?	13
1.6	Literacy in contemporary society	15
1.7	Stories, narrative and identity	18
	Works cited	20

Chapter 2 Reading

2.1	Writing as reading?	21
2.2	A love of literature	23
2.3	The discipline of English	24
2.4	The new English student	27
2.5	Plagiarism: too complete a loss of self	36
2.6	How to read: ways of avoiding plagiarism	39
2.7	What to read	41
2.8	Some recommended websites	44
	Works cited	45

Chapter 3 Argument

3.1	Having something to say	48
3.2	Rethinking dialogue: Mikhail Mikhailovich Bakhtin (1895–1975)	50
3.3	Stories, arguments and democracy	52

3.4	The folded paper: how to stand at a distance and start a dialogue with a text	54
3.5	What is rhetoric?	61
3.6	A very brief survey of Classical rhetoric	62
3.7	Wayne Booth (1921–2005) and The Rhetoric of Fiction	71
3.8	More ways of discovering arguments	73
	Works cited	77

Chapter 4 Essays

4.1	What are essays for?	79
4.2	What is an essay?	80
4.3	How do you think you write an essay?	88
4.4	The stages of writing an essay	88
4.5	Thinking of or about the question	89
4.6	Research	93
4.7	Making a plan	102
4.8	The thesis statement	105
4.9	Writing the main body of the essay	106
4.10	Beginnings and endings	108
4.11	Editing	110
4.12	Finally, a frequently asked question: ‘Is it OK to use “I”?’	117
	Works cited	118

Chapter 5 Sentences

5.1	The most common errors made in student assignments	121
5.2	Errors involving clauses	122
5.3	Errors involving commas	125
5.4	Errors involving apostrophes	128
5.5	Errors involving pronouns	131
5.6	Errors involving verbs	133
5.7	Errors involving words	138
	Works cited	141

Chapter 6 References

6.1	The MLA system	143
6.2	Citations in the MLA style	144
6.3	Quotations	148
6.4	Bibliographies and Works Cited in the MLA style	149
	Works cited	155
	Appendix. Sample essay by Alex Hobbs	156
	Index	166