

Contents

Editor's Note	vii
Introduction	1
Harold Bloom
Arthur Miller's The Crucible and the Salem Witch Trials: A Historian's View	9
Edmund S. Morgan
The Wooster Group, Arthur Miller and The Crucible	23
David Savran
All My Sons and Paternal Authority	39
James A. Robinson
'Unsafe convictions': 'unhappy' confessions in The Crucible	57
Valerie Lowe
Death of a Salesman and American Leadership: Life Imitates Art	79
John S. Shockley
Issues of Identity in Broken Glass : A Humanist Response to a Postmodern World	93
Susan C. W. Abbotson

“Personality Wins the Day”: Death of a Salesman and Popular Sales Advice Literature Brenda Murphy	107
A Portrait of Arthur Miller Jeffrey Meyers	115
Death of a Salesman : Deracination and Its Discontents Julius Novick	131
Arthur Miller’s Ironic Resurrection Jeffrey D. Mason	143
Arthur Miller vs. Columbia Pictures: The Strange Case of Career of a Salesman Kevin Kerrane	169
Finishing the Picture: Arthur Miller, 1915–2005 Laurence Goldstein	185
Miller’s Tale: The playwright drew a line between reaching out and selling out Wendy Smith	191
Arthur Miller and the Art of the Possible Steven R. Centola	197
Chronology	215
Contributors	217
Bibliography	221
Acknowledgements	225
Index	229