

Table of contents

Foreword	VII
Introduction	IX
The early Middle English scribe: Sprach er wie er schrieb? Margaret Laing	1
Essex/Suffolk scribes and their language in fifteenth-century London Lister M. Matheson	45
Middle English word geography: Methodology and applications illustrated María José Carrillo-Linares & Edurne Garrido-Anes	67
Northern Middle English: Towards telling the full story Julia Fernández-Cuesta & M^aNieves Rodríguez-Ledesma	91
The origins of the Northern Subject Rule Nynke de Haas	111
Dynamic dialectology and social networks Mieko Ogura & William S-Y Wang	131
The Celtic Hypothesis hasn't gone away: New perspectives on old debates Markku Filppula	153
On the trail of “intolerable Scoto-Hibernic jargon”: Ulster English, Irish English and dialect hygiene in William Carleton's Traits and stories of the Irish peasantry (First Series, 1830) Kevin McCafferty	171
Exceptions to sound change and external motivation Raymond Hickey	185
Index of subjects	195