

CONTENTS

Preface xi

Resisting, Conspiring, Completing: An Introduction 1
Improvement and Moral Perfectionism
Moral Perfectionism in the Winter of 1866–67
Historical Sources
Implicative and Conclusive Criticism

PART I. THE NARRATIVE OF IMPROVEMENT

1. Skepticism and Perfectionism I: Mechanization and Desire 35
Standing Before Camelot
Skepticism as Ungoverned Desire: Browning's Duke
Skepticism as Mechanization: Carlyle and Mill
Mr. Dombey Rides Death
2. Skepticism and Perfectionism II: Weakness of Will 54
Victorian Akrasia
Perspective and Commitment
Hard Times and Akrasia
Daniel Deronda and Second-Person Relations
Orchestrating Perspectives
Mark Tapley's Nausea
- Interlude: Critical Free Indirect Discourse 84

3. Reading Thoughts: Casuistry and Transfiguration 92

Casuistry and the Novel

The Theater of Casuistry: Dramatic Monologues

Exemplary Criticism

PART II. THE MORAL PSYCHOLOGY OF IMPROVEMENT

4. Perfectly Helpless 123

The Reticulation of Constraint

Sigmund Freud and Richard Simpson

5. Responsiveness, Knowingness, and John Henry Newman 142

"An Evil Crust Is on Them"

The Violence of Our Denials

Watching and Imitation

Close Reading

6. The Knowledge of Shame 162

Skepticism and Shame

Three Scenes of Shame

Edith Dombey's Shame

Shame and Being Known

Shame and Great Expectations

Shame and Narration

7. On Lives Unled 191

Nailed to Ourselves

Environments for the Optative

The Jamesian Optative

Afterword 219

Notes 223

Bibliography 235

Index 251