

CONTENTS

	PAGE
Foreword	vii
I. Race and language	1
Early attempts to determine the position of the American race	1
Classifications based on physical type, language, and customs	2
Relations between physical type, language, and customs	3
Permanence of physical type; changes in language and culture	3
Permanence of language; changes of physical type	4
Changes of language and type	5
Permanence of type and language; change of culture	5
Hypothesis of original correlation of type, language, and culture	6
Artificial character of all classifications of mankind	9
II. The characteristics of language	10
Definition of language	10
Character of phonetics	10
Number of sounds unlimited	10
Each language uses a limited number of sounds	11
Alleged lack of differentiation of sounds in primitive languages	11
Brief description of phonetics	13
Unconsciousness of phonetic elements	18
Grammatical categories	18
Differences in categories of different languages	18
Limitation of the number of phonetic groups expressing ideas	18
Grammatical processes	21
Word and sentence	21
Stem and affix	26
Discussion of grammatical categories	28
Nominal categories	28
Gender	28
Plural	29
Case	30
Tense	31
Personal pronouns	31
Demonstrative pronouns	32
Verbal categories	33
Interpretation of grammatical categories	34
III. Classification of languages	36
Origin of dialects	36
Comparison of distinct languages	36
Mutual influences of languages	39
Phonetic influences	39
Grammatical influences	39
Lexicographic influences	40
Origin of similarities; by dissemination or by parallel development	42

III. Classification of languages—Continued.
Influence of environment on language.....	44
Influence of common psychic traits.....	47
Uncertainty of definition of linguistic families.....	48
IV. Linguistics and ethnology.....	49
Practical need of linguistic studies for ethnological purposes.....	49
Theoretical importance of linguistic studies.....	52
Language a part of ethnological phenomena in general.....	52
Language and thought.....	53
Unconscious character of linguistic phenomena.....	56
V. Characteristics of American languages.....	62