

CONTENTS

Preface to the second edition	xiii
Preface to the third edition	xv
Acknowledgements	xvii
Transcription conventions	xix
Introduction	1
Background sources and further reading	8
PART ONE THE DEVELOPMENT OF LANGUAGE	11
1 The beginnings of language development	13
Learning language: the first words	13
Some precursors of language development	15
The early communicative expressions as a protolanguage	18
From protolanguage to holophrases	22
Two-word utterances as the beginnings of syntax	24
Basic meaning relations during the two-word phase	27
A problem of method	30
Background sources and further reading	33
Follow-up activities	35
2 Dialogue and language development	41
Further developments in meaning	41

The child's strategies for dialogue: establishing shared attention	46
Further dialogic strategies: responses	47
Ideational and interpersonal developments are closely interdependent	49
Dialogue as an arena for language development	51
Theoretical paradigms of language development	62
Conclusion	66
Background sources and further reading	67
Follow-up activities	68

PART TWO LINGUISTIC DIVERSITY AND THE SPEECH COMMUNITY 71

3 Language and regional variation: accent and dialect 73

Regional variation within a speech community	73
Regional variation and social structure	74
The social stratification of pronunciation	75
Shifts in pronunciation according to situation	76
Attitudes to pronunciation within the speech community	76
Working-class loyalty to non-prestige forms	77
'Hypercorrection' in the lower middle class	78
How do some patterns of pronunciation become the prestige forms?	78
Accents as a residue of earlier dialect differences	79
Factors underlying the survival of accents	80
Accent evaluation	82
Accents in television advertisements	83
Changing attitudes to accents	83
Surviving dialect differences	85
Dialect levelling and 'Estuary English'	87
Background sources and further reading	89
Follow-up activities	91

4 Language and ethnicity 95

Language variation and ethnicity	95
Linguistic markers of African-Caribbean identity	97
Origins and emergence of Caribbean Creole	98
Some linguistic differences between Jamaican Creole and Standard English	99

Social situation and the use of Creole	100
Asymmetrical selection of Creole forms within the African-Caribbean community	101
The continuance of Creole	103
Emphasising ethnicity in speech	104
Youth, subcultures and 'crossing' ethnicity	105
Background sources and further reading	106
Follow-up activities	108
5 Language and subcultures: anti-language	113
Anti-language	113
Linguistic features of an anti-language	113
Rapping and anti-language	115
Anti-language and social structure	117
Anti-language and the speech community	119
Background sources and further reading	119
Follow-up activities	120
6 Language and situation: register	123
Language is sensitive to its context of situation	123
Register	125
Conclusion	148
Background sources and further reading	148
Follow-up activities	151
7 Language and social class: restricted and elaborated speech variants	159
Language and social class	159
Restricted and elaborated speech variants	160
Two kinds of social formation	164
Role systems and codes	165
Codes and social class	166
Reactions	168
An alternative hypothesis	169
Background sources and further reading	169
Follow-up activities	171
8 Language and gender	173
Introduction	173
'Gender' versus 'sex'	173
Do men and women talk differently? The claims and the evidence	177

Conclusions: difference and dominance	192
Background sources and further reading	198
Follow-up activities	199

9 Linguistic diversity and the speech community: conclusion 201

The speech community	201
Diversity in language	202
The relationship of the standard dialect to other varieties	203
Communicative styles, subcultures, and the speech community	204
Conclusions: language and community	210
Background sources and further reading	213

PART THREE LANGUAGE AND SOCIAL INTERACTION 215

10 Language and social interaction 217

Doing things with words: utterances perform actions	218
The normal coherence of talk: the actions performed by utterances typically cohere, one with another	219
Formats for providing coherence: the two-part structure or 'adjacency pair'	220
How do we recognize what an utterance is doing: in particular, what counts as a question?	221
Doing things with words: managing the discourse	231
Social relations and the management of discourse	235
Social relations, language, and culture	236
Conclusion	241
Background sources and further reading	242
Follow-up activities	245

PART FOUR LANGUAGE AND REPRESENTATION 247

11 Language and representation 249

Language and representation	249
Two conflicting positions: the 'universalist' versus the 'relativist'	250

Vocabulary differences between languages	251
Grammatical differences between languages	252
Difficulties in the relativist position	253
The ‘interested’ character of linguistic representation	254
The vocabulary of modern warfare	257
After 9/11	262
Sentences and representation	266
Transitivity and the depiction of civil disorder	269
Industrial disputes and civil disorder: the miners’ strike (1984–5) and the Paris riots (2007)	271
Language in the news: violent men and crimes against women	277
Conclusions	280
Background sources and further reading	283
Follow-up activities	286

References	289
Index	305