

CONTENTS

ABSTRACT	i
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS	ii
CONTENTS	iii
Glossary	viii
1. Glossary for methodology	viii
2. Glossary of historical usage	x
3. Glossary of educational terms	xiv
4. Glossary of socio-cultural terms	xvi
5. Glossary of acronyms	xviii
5.1 General Acronyms	xviii
5.2 Acronyms for the Names of schools	xix
5.3 Questionnaire notations	xix
LIST OF FIGURES	xx
LIST OF TABLES	xxi
Chapter 1: Introduction	1
1.1 Fijian and Indian socio-cultural expectations of education and their differential attainments in English	2
1.2 Substantiation of the thesis	3
1.3 Justifications of the study	8
1.3.1 Professional justification	8
1.3.2 Academic justification	9
1.4 Overview of the thesis structure and its development	10
1.4.1 Placement of the study	11
1.4.2 Three stages of increasingly-focused research	11
1.4.3 Outcomes of the study	14
1.5 Indications of limitations on presentation and the applicability of the results	15
Chapter 2: Literature review	18
2.1 Global and political support for the English Language Policy (ELP)	19
2.1.1 Historical background to the implementation of the ELP	19
2.1.2 Fostering a civic Fijian identity through a common language	20
2.1.3 Spurring international trade and tourism by implementing the ELP	20
2.1.4 English as the medium of instruction - a colonial heritage	20
2.1.5 Disinterest in vernacular language policies in education	21
2.2 Literature review of relevant curriculum theories	21
2.2.1 Global teaching methodologies for English	22
2.2.2 Conceptions of curriculum	23
2.2.3 Local interpretation of the English curriculum	24
2.2.4 Backwash effect of examinations in Fiji	25
2.3 Teaching of English in Fiji	26
2.3.1 Geographic/economic environments and their relevance to English teaching	26
2.3.1.1 Geographic characteristics of the Fiji Isles	27
2.3.1.2 Fiji's ethnolinguistic diversity necessitating English as the language of instruction	27
2.3.1.3 Enforcing ELP in education for economic prosperity	28
2.3.1.3 Enforcing ELP in education for economic prosperity	28
2.3.2 Historical environments and their relevance to English teaching (1830-1999)	29
2.3.2.1 Missionary education	29
2.3.2.1.1 Evangelising by establishing Methodist schools	30
2.3.2.1.1.1 Teaching the basics	30
2.3.2.1.1.2 Introducing literacy to an oral culture	31
2.3.2.1.1.3 Promoting literacy in the vernacular	31
2.3.2.1.1.4 Teaching Christianity	32

2.3.2.1.2 Roman Catholic (RC) missionary education	32
2.3.2.1.2.1 Instituting an academic education	32
2.3.2.1.2.2 RC use of English for instruction	33
2.3.2.2 Early colonial education 1874 to 1928	33
2.3.2.2.1 Influences from education decision-making in early colonial times	33
2.3.2.2.2 Ad hoc educational planning in early colonial times	34
2.3.2.2.2.1 Delivering an academically-oriented curriculum in government schools	35
2.3.2.2.2.2 Using English as the language of instruction	35
2.3.2.2.3 Widening educational provisions	35
2.3.2.2.2.1 Instituting compulsory education for native children	35
2.3.2.2.2.2 Revoking compulsory schooling for all native children	36
2.3.2.2.2.3 Extending educational facilities for chiefly Fijian boys	36
2.3.2.2.2.4 Withholding educational provisions from Indian children	37
2.3.2.2.2.5 Instating schooling for Indian children	37
2.3.2.2.2.6 Initiating government participation in education	38
2.3.2.3 Late colonial education 1929 - 1970	39
2.3.2.2.1 The expansion of educational provisions for all children	40
2.3.2.2.2 Educational planning in the 1940s and 1950s	40
2.3.2.2.3 The emergence of secondary education	40
2.3.2.2.4 Determining entry to teacher training: the Fiji Junior Certificate	41
2.3.2.2.5 Implementing the English language policy	41
2.3.2.2.6 The growth of secondary education prior to independence	42
2.3.2.3 Post colonial education	42
2.3.2.3.1 Changes to curriculum content: the UNDP project	43
2.3.2.3.2 Changes to secondary school examination: restructuring the Fiji Junior Certificate	43
2.3.2.3.3 Expansion of secondary education: swelling educational resources	44
2.3.2.3.4 Promoting equal ethnic representation in secondary and tertiary education	44
2.3.2.3.5 Diversifying secondary course options	44
2.3.3 English curriculum in Forms III and IV since 1983	45
2.4 Literature related to the target construct and explanatory constructs	46
2.4.1 Influence of socio-cultural expectations on teaching	47
2.4.2 EH - Event Horizon	48
2.4.3 SURA - the Social Unit of Resource Allocation	49
2.4.4 DoA - Degree of Autonomy	53
Chapter 3: Structuring methods and processing methods	56
3.1 An Historical Grounded Theory developed towards quantitative generalisation	56
3.1.1 Using an historical Grounded Theory research paradigm	57
3.1.2 Extenuating Grounded Theory methodological weaknesses	60
3.2 Structure and composition of the data sets	63
3.2.1 Description of the data sets	63
3.2.2 School data sets and their sampling methods	66
3.2.2.1 Interviews in schools	67
3.2.2.2 Classroom observations of English teaching	74
3.2.3 Data management	78
3.3 Methodological limitations of the study	79
Chapter 4: Description of the data and the data collection for the exploratory ethnography	81
4.1 Fiji College of Advanced Education (FCAE)	81
4.1.1 FCAE English Head of Department (HOD)	82
4.1.2 FCAE Vice-principal (VP)	82
4.1.3 Teachers and English courses	82

4.2 Institute of Fijian Language and Culture and Fijian Affairs Board (FAB)	83
4.3 Parliament of Fiji library and National Archives - primary documents	84
4.4 Bureau of Statistics and Institute of Education (IOE) - Documents	86
4.5 Minister of Fijian Affairs and two Permanent Secretaries for Education - Interviews	88
Chapter 5: Research instruments and methodology for the exploratory ethnography	90
5.1 Emic chain - gaining entry to key informants	90
5.2. Topical and cultural interviews with informants and conversation partners	91
5.2.1 Constructions of the interviews	94
5.3 Methods for collecting and analysing classroom data	95
5.4 Historical research methods	95
Chapter 6 Description of data and data collection for the development and verification of differential themes	97
6.1 Major relevant social-cultural structures - Interviews, observations, documents	97
6.1.1 Fijian social-cultural structures	97
6.1.1.1 Visit to the Fijian NLTB	98
6.1.1.2 Interview with Professor Ravuvu	98
6.1.1.3 UN conference on the draft resolution on the rights of indigenous peoples	99
6.1.1.4 South Pacific Commission conference on health education	99
6.1.2 Indian social-cultural structures	100
6.1.2.1 Indian religious influences	101
6.1.2.2 Interviews with Principals, VP, teachers and administrators	102
6.2 Rural schools and communities - Interviews, observations, documents	103
6.2.1 Geographic situation of schools, communities and homes	104
6.2.2 Rural Fijian schools and communities	104
6.2.2.1 Boarding at Fijian rural schools	105
6.2.2.2 Scarce curriculum resources in Fijian rural schools	106
6.2.2.3 Disregard for written school rules in Fijian rural schools	107
6.2.2.4 Homework avoidance in Fijian rural schools	107
6.2.2.5 Fulfilling social obligations in Fijian rural communities	108
6.2.3 Rural Indian schools and communities	109
6.2.3.1 Meticulous school maintenance	110
6.2.3.2 HOD control over English teachers	110
6.2.3.3 Parental monitoring of children's school work	111
6.2.3.4 School support for education	111
6.2.4 Educational meetings on differential attainments	112
6.2.4.1 Principals' meeting - administrative proceedings	112
6.2.4.2 Sevusevu - traditional meeting	115
6.2.5 Interviews with regional education officers	116
6.2.5.1 Fijian regional education officers	116
6.2.5.2 The Indian regional education officer	117
6.2.6 English workshop for regional education officers	118
6.2.7 Post-Form IV rural education - examination irregularities	118
6.3 Urban schools and communities - Interviews, observations, documents	119
6.3.1 Description of the urban Fijian secondary schools in the data set	120
6.3.2 Description of the urban Indian secondary schools in the data set	121
6.3.3 The bi-ethnic urban schools	123
6.4 Post-census verification of constructs	124
Chapter 7: Research instruments and methodology for the development and verification of differential themes	125
7.1 Methodology guiding data collection and analysis	125
7.1.1 Chosen methods of analysis and reporting	126

7.1.2 Original ethnographic reporting	128
7.2 Structuring qualitative data using interviews and text analysis	130
7.2.1 Semi-structured topical and evaluative interviews	130
7.2.2 Methods of text analysis used	131
7.2.3 Coding, transcripts and documents on-line and off-line	134
7.2.4 Video recording	136
7.2.5 Photographic recording	136
7.3 Use of software for structuring the qualitative data	137
Chapter 8: Description of data and data collection for the generalisation of the differential themes
8.1 Data for ethnographic generalisation from rural and urban schools	138
8.2 Data from mixed methods generalisation	139
8.3 Data from generalisation by final questionnaire	140
8.3.1 Sampling design process for quantitative generalisation by survey	141
8.3.2 Strategic quantitative data collection by survey	141
8.4 Interview data validating final questionnaire	142
8.5 Data for testing reliability of final questionnaire	143
Chapter 9: Methodology for the generalisation of differential themes
9.1 Methods for ethnographic generalisation	144
9.1.1 Methods of textual coding and analysis	145
9.1.2 Video analysis	145
9.1.3 Use of stimulus photographs	146
9.2 Process methods for mixed methods generalisation	146
9.2.1 Design of pilot questions	148
9.2.2 Pilot format considerations	149
9.2.3 Quantitative coding and computer input for pilot	150
9.2.4 Quantitative data verifications	150
9.2.5 Coding of qualitative pilot data	151
9.2.6 Qualitative pilot data verifications	152
9.3 Methods for generalisation by questionnaire	154
9.3.1 Design of final questionnaire	154
9.3.2 Coding and computer input	155
9.3.3 Data verifications	158
9.3.4 Reliability tests	159
9.4 Verification of questionnaire responses by classroom observations and from interviews with final questionnaire respondents	168
Chapter 10: Socio-cultural influences on the teaching of English in Fiji	169
10.1 The development of the Cultural Constructs as an illustrative example of quantitative exploration.	169
10.2 The development of the Cultural Index as an illustrative example of quantitative exploration	172
10.2.1 The need for a measure of Cultural Identity	175
10.2.2 Calculating the CI	177
10.2.3 Reliability and validity of the Cultural Index	179
10.2.3.1 Test-retest reliability of the Cultural Index	179
10.2.3.2 Construct validity of the Cultural Index	181
10.2.3.3 Predictive Validity of the CI	183
10.2.4 Sensitivity of the Primary and Relative Cultural Indices compared to Ethnicity	184
10.2.5 Uses of the Cultural Index	192
10.2.6 Potential uses of CI	194
10.3 Illustrative example of mixed quantitative and qualitative exploration	195
10.4 Comparative grounded composite description of Fijian and Indian rural schools	203
10.4.1 Rural Fijian schools and communities	204
10.4.1.1 Composite school environments of Koronivuli Lomolomo (KL)	204
10.4.1.2 KL school management practices and objectives	205
10.4.1.3 Operationalising the FJC English curriculum at KL	206
10.4.1.3.1 Compartmentalised language use at KL	206
10.4.1.3.2 Teaching EFL in Forms III and IV at KL	207

10.4.1.4 KL students	208
10.4.1.5 KL students' homes	209
10.4.2 Rural Indian schools and communities	209
10.4.2.1 Composite school environments of Saraswati Junior Secondary School (SJSS)	210
10.4.2.2 SJSS school management practices and objectives	210
10.4.2.3 Operationalising the FJC English curriculum at SJSS	212
10.4.2.3.1 Teachers' accountability for the Fiji Junior pass rate	212
10.4.2.3.2 Teaching EFL in Forms III and IV at Saraswati Junior Secondary School	214
10.4.2.4 SJSS students	215
10.4.2.5 SJSS students' homes	216
10.5 Biographies of composite HODs	220
10.5.1 The Fijian HOD: A modal grounded composite	221
10.5.2 The Indian HOD: A modal grounded composite	221
10.6 Descriptions of Urban schools	223
10.6.1 How urban Fijian secondary schools differ from rural Fijian secondary schools	225
10.6.2 How urban Indian secondary schools differ from other secondary schools	226
10.6.3 The bi-ethnic urban schools	233
10.7 Culture, Gender and Ethnicity	237
10.7.1 Relative cultural indices	239
10.7.2 The third culture - Westernness	241
10.7.3 Fractionalised Fijian culture	243
Chapter 11: Cultural constructions of English teaching	243
11.1 Development of the Cultural Constructs using Inductive Grounded Theory	243
11.2 Inappropriateness of multivariate quantitative techniques for deriving cultural constructs from multi-serving behaviours	246
11.3 Development of the conceptual framework as the explanatory model of the thesis	252
11.4 Integrated structure of target construct and explanatory constructs	255
11.4.1 Cultural indicators comprising the conceptual framework	256
11.4.2 Explanation of construct interdependence	256
11.5 Explanatory construct of Event Horizon - Indicative cultural community indicators	257
11.6 Explanatory construct Social Unit of Resource Allocation - Indicative cultural community indicators	258
11.7 Explanatory construct of Degree of Autonomy - Indicative cultural community indicators	258
11.8 Target construct of Differential Teaching - Indicative cultural Differential Teaching indicators	258
11.9 Empirical verification of the explanatory model and thesis	259
11.9.1 Teaching and community behaviours used for canonical correlation analysis	259
11.9.2 The canonical teaching and community variates resulting from the analysis	262
11.9.3 Empirical verification and support for the explanatory model	264
Chapter 12: Conclusions and implications	264
12.1 Fractionalisation of Fijian Culture	265
12.1.1 Marginalisation of the Fijian male	268
12.2 Subtractive vs additive cultural routes to English proficiency	269
12.3 Theoretical generalisation of the four socio-cultural constructs	272
12.4 Summary implications	273
	278
Bibliography	305
Appendix 1: Geography and Demography of Fiji	305
1.1 Maps of the Fiji Islands	306
1.2 Fiji demographic facts and figures	306
1.3 Fiji background information	308
Appendix 2: Final questionnaire	308