

Contents

Acknowledgments

Introduction 1

Chapter 1 Introduction

1.1	Anaphoric relations and binding theory	3
1.2	Reconstruction in English	5
1.3	Reconstruction in Chinese	7
1.4	The morphology mapping problem	9
1.5	The construction generalization problem	9
1.6	The logical problem of language acquisition	10
1.7	The layout of the monograph.	11

Chapter 2 Linguistic Theories on Reconstruction

2.1	Introduction	12
2.2	Linguistic theories of Reconstruction	13
2.2.1	The minimalist program and GB Theory	13
2.2.2	Two options at LF	15
2.2.3	The cyclic approach to anaphora	16
2.2.4	The Optimality Condition on Dependencies (OCD)	18
2.2.5	The Internal Subject Hypothesis (ISH)	19
2.3	Summary	21

Chapter 3 Prior studies on L2 learners' knowledge of reflexives

3.1	Access to UG in second language acquisition	22
3.2	Language transfer: a generative perspective	26
3.3	Governing category parameter and the Subset Principle	27
3.4	The movement of anaphors at LF	31
3.5	The relativized SUBJECT approach	33
3.6	L2 studies on parameter settings and the Subset Principle	34
3.7	L2 studies on a cluster of properties of UG	47
3.8	Drawbacks of L2 research in reflexive binding	56
3.9	Scope of this project	57

Chapter 4 Timed Sentence Judgments on Reconstruction in English

4.1	Introduction	59
4.2	Experiment 1	59
4.2.1	Subjects	59
4.2.2	Materials and design	59
4.2.3	Procedure	61
4.2.4	Predictions	62
4.2.5	Results	63
4.2.6	Discussion	66

4.3	Experiment 2	70
	4.3.1 Subjects	70
	4.3.2 Materials and design	70
	4.3.3 Procedure	70
	4.3.4 Predictions	70
	4.3.5 Results	71
	4.3.6 Discussion	72
4.4	General discussion	74
4.5	Summary	77

Chapter 5 Offline Sentence Judgments on Reconstruction in English

5.1	Introduction	78
5.2	Experiment	78
	5.2.1 Subjects	78
	5.2.2 Materials and design	79
	5.2.3 Procedure	79
	5.2.4 Predictions	82
	5.2.5 Results	83
	5.2.6 Discussion	87
5.3	Summary	94

Chapter 6 English Learners' Interpretation of Reconstruction in Chinese

6.1	Introduction	95
6.2	Experiment	96
	6.2.1 Subjects	96
	6.2.2 Materials and design	97
	6.2.3 Procedure	98
	6.2.4 Predictions	99
	6.2.5 Results	100
	6.2.6 Discussion	102
6.3	Summary	108

Chapter 7 Summary and Conclusion

7.1	Introduction	109
7.2	Second language learners' Interpretation of reconstruction	109
	7.2.1 Chinese learners' interpretation of reconstruction in English	109
	7.2.2 English learners' interpretation of reconstruction in Chinese	110
	7.2.3 L1 induced language mapping	110
7.3	UG constraints and L1 induced language mapping	111
7.4	Potential implications for language teaching	113
7.5	Future prospects	114

References	116
-------------------	-----

Appendix I	132
-------------------	-----

Appendix II	141
Appendix III	143
Appendix IV	145
Appendix V	155
Appendix VI	156
Name Index	160
Subject Index	167