Contents

Series editors' preface xi
Foreword xiii
Acknowledgements xvii

I INTRODUCTION AND PROLEGOMENA

Introduction 3

1 Lexis and the lexicon: some general considerations 8
   Language seen as words 8
   Defining the word 10
   The domain of the lexicon 14
   Concluding summary 38

II RESEARCH REVIEW

2 Lexical development: an overview 41
   The lexical challenge 41
   L1 lexical development: from first words to semantic hierarchies 52
   L1 and L2 lexical development: a preliminary assessment of similarities and contrasts 79
   Concluding summary 81

3 Modelling the lexicon 83
   Some models of the mental lexicon 84
   Modularity and the mental lexicon 111
   Connectionism 121
   Concluding summary 128

4 The L2 mental lexicon: a law unto itself? 130
   Form and meaning in the L2 mental lexicon 130
   Separation/integration between the L1 and the L2 mental lexicon 167
   Concluding summary 189
III EVIDENCE FROM THE TRINITY COLLEGE DUBLIN MODERN LANGUAGES RESEARCH PROJECT

5 The Trinity College Dublin Modern Languages Research Project in broad outline 193
Subjects 194
Methodology 194
Computerization 216
L2 lexicon-related issues explored to date using MLRP findings 217
Concluding summary 219

6 Findings on form and meaning in the L2 mental lexicon 220
C-test results from the pilot phase of the project 220
C-test results from 1990 onwards 224
Word association test results 233
Concluding summary 236

7 Findings on the cross-linguistic factor in lexical processing and acquisition 238
C-test data from the pilot phase of the project 239
C-test data from 1990 onwards 242
Other data 246
Concluding summary 249

8 Findings on communication strategies 251
Communication strategy research within the MLRP 252
Strategic L2 lexical innovation: a case study 254
Cross-linguistic strategies and individual learner contrasts 257
Reflection and strategies in L2 learning 260
Concluding summary 264

IV CONCLUSION

A recapitulation, some inferences and some hopes for the future 269
The ground covered in this book 269
Some implications of the foregoing discussion 271
Exploring the L2 mental lexicon: some hopes of things to come 275

References 280
Index 328