

Contents

General Editor's Preface	xi
Author's Preface	xvii
Acknowledgements	xxi
Series List	xxiii
PART I TOWARDS THEORY	1
1 A quick round tour	3
1.0 Introduction	3
1.1 Pure and applied studies	4
1.2 Basic terminology	6
1.2.1 Second language ^x	7
1.2.2 Interlanguage ^x	7
1.2.3 Input and intake	8
1.2.4 Metalanguage	10
1.2.5 Acquisition, learning and development	11
1.2.6 Strategy	12
1.2.7 Crosslinguistic influence/language transfer	13
1.2.8 Knowledge	14
1.2.9 (Processing) control and mental library	15
1.2.10 Variability	16
1.2.11 Modularity	17
1.2.12 LAD	18
1.2.13 Elicitation	19
1.3 Myths and prejudices	20
1.3.1 Overview	20
1.3.2 Is second language learning doomed to failure?	21
1.3.3 Does instruction help?	21
2 Learner systems	22
2.0 Overview	22
2.1 Early perspectives	22
2.1.1 Corder ^x	23

2.1.2	Transitional competence building	28
✓2.1.3	Nemser and Selinker ✓	29
2.1.4	Interlanguage and child language	33
2.1.5	IL product and IL processes	35
2.1.6	Interlanguage strategies	40
2.1.7	Some conceptual problems concerning IL strategies	41
2.2	Summary	42

3 Creative construction 43

3.0	Introduction	43
3.1	Links with first language acquisition	43
3.1.1	Short overview of research	44
3.1.2	L1 and L2 acquisition	46
3.2	Creative construction theory ✓	48
3.2.1	The main tenets	50
3.2.2	Developmental patterns	51
3.2.3	Rate and route of development	52
3.2.4	Differences in emphasis	58
3.3	Summary	58

4 Analysing interlanguage 60

4.0	Introduction	60
4.1	Heuristics	60
4.1.1	Gathering spontaneous data	62
4.1.2	Counting types of tokens	66
4.2	Theory-driven techniques	68
4.2.1	Naturalistic data	69
4.2.2	Subject selection	70
4.2.3	Linguistic variables	71
4.2.4	Controlled elicitation techniques	73
4.3	Summary	81

PART II REVISIONS AND ALTERNATIVES 83

5 Early refinements 85

ILH	5.0	The big three	85
	5.1	Lines of development	87
	5.1.1	Variability	89
	5.1.2	A functional perspective	91

X	5.2	Modes of knowledge	93
	κ	5.2.1	Krashen's monitor	93
		5.2.2	Defying the natural order	94
		5.2.3	Implicit and explicit	95
		5.2.4	Knowledge storage versus knowledge access	95
L		5.3	Unanswered questions	97
	6	Theoretical developments	99
	6.0	Introduction	99
	6.1	IL and creative construction theory reappraised	99
		6.1.1	The early IL hypothesis reviewed	99
		6.1.2	Creative construction reviewed	103
	6.2	Some other alternatives	106
		6.2.1	Heterogeneous competence	106
		6.2.2	Cognitive psychology applied	112
		6.2.3	Pienemann's Teachability Hypothesis	116
	6.3	Summary	118
		PART III THE COMING OF AGE	121
	7	Theoretical applications of linguistics	123
	7.0	Introduction	123
	7.1	Theory and 'application'	123
	7.2	Markedness in linguistics and acquisition	125
		7.2.1	Markedness in linguistics	126
		7.2.2	Markedness and acquisition	129
		7.2.3	Markedness and parameter setting	132
	7.3	Other areas of language	137
		7.3.1	Lexis	138
		7.3.2	Phonology	139
		7.3.3	Pragmatics and discourse analysis	139
		7.3.4	IL and modularity	141
	7.4	Summary	142
	8	The role of UG in second language learning	143
	8.0	Introduction	143
	8.1	Psycholinguistics	143
	8.2	The role of UG in IL development	145
		8.2.1	More on learnability theory	147

8.3	The logical possibilities	154
8.3.1	The fossilised UG view	154
8.3.2	The recreative view	155
8.3.3	Wild grammars	157
8.3.4	Methodological issues	159
8.3.5	The resetting view	160
8.4	Theoretical issues	163
8.4.1	The overgeneration problem	165
8.4.2	Subsets and supersets	167
8.4.3	Learning scenarios and modularity	169
8.5	Summary	170
9	Implications and applications	172
9.0	Introduction	172
9.1	Theoretical and practical relationships	173
9.2	Guidance in acquiring competence and control	174
9.2.1	Guiding development at the level of knowledge: logical options	174
9.2.2	The control dimension and teaching techniques	182
9.3	General cognitive theory	185
9.4	Conclusion	186
	Questions and topics for discussion	187
	Extended glossary of terms	195
	Bibliography	211
	Appendix: Standard research resources	227
	Index	229