Chapter I:	PATTERNS IN THE PHONOLOGY OF SECOND LANGUAGE
	ACQUISITION . . . . .	1
1.0.	Introduction . . . . .	1
1.1.	Developmental and systematic aspects of second language sound systems . . . . .	1
	1.1.1. Developmental aspects of L2 sound systems . . . . .	1
	1.1.2. Systematic aspects of L2 sound systems . . . . .	3
1.2.	Patterns of contrast . . . . .	7
	1.2.1. 'Theoretical' and 'applied' contrastive phonology . . . . .	7
	1.2.2. Contrastive phonology in a phonemic perspective . . . . .	9
	1.2.3. Contrastive phonology in a generative perspective . . . . .	11
	1.2.3.0. Introduction . . . . .	11
	1.2.3.1. The contrast of rules . . . . .	11
	1.2.3.2. The contrast of underlying representations . . . . .	13
	1.2.3.3. The contrast of features . . . . .	13
	1.2.3.4. The contrast of surface representations . . . . .	15
	1.2.3.5. Prospects for contrastive generative phonology . . . . .	16
	1.2.4. Conclusion . . . . .	17
1.3.	Patterns of identification . . . . .	18
	1.3.1. Categories of identification and categories of contrast . . . . .	18
	1.3.2. Interlingual identifications in structuralist analysis . . . . .	18
	1.3.3. The phonological specification of 'identificational' categories . . . . .	20
	1.3.3.1. Identificational categories in feature theory . . . . .	20
	1.3.3.2. Identificational categories in a typological markedness theory . . . . .	21
	1.3.3.3. Interlingual identification: phonological units, properties, contexts and processes . . . . .	23
	1.3.4. Units of interlingual identification . . . . .	25
	1.3.5. Phonetic and phonological processes of interlingual identification . . . . .	27
	1.3.5.1. The phonological categorization of interlingual identification . . . . .	27
	1.3.5.2. The phonetic nature of interlingual identifications . . . . .	28
	1.3.5.3. Psycholinguistic aspects of interlingual phonological identifications . . . . .	29
1.4.	Patterns of influence . . . . .	30
	1.4.1. Native language influence: interference and transfer in second language acquisition . . . . .	30
	1.4.1.0. Introduction . . . . .	30

1.4.1.1.	Phonological interference and transfer in a behaviourist perspective . . . . .	30
1.4.1.2.	Phonological interference and transfer in a cognitivist perspective . . . . .	32
1.4.2.	Universal structural influences on second language phonological acquisition . . . . .	35
1.4.3.	Sociolinguistic influences on second language phonological acquisition . . . . .	36
1.4.4.	Target language influence on second language acquisition: (over-)generalization . . . . .	38
1.4.5.	(First language) Developmental influence on second language acquisition . . . . .	39
1.4.5.1.	General models of developmental influences in second language acquisition . . . . .	39
1.4.5.2.	(First language) Syllable structure processes in second language acquisition . . . . .	42
1.4.5.3.	Structural conditions and sequencing orders for developmental processes in second language acquisition . . . . .	45
1.4.5.4.	'Natural' phonological processes in second language acquisition . . . . .	48
1.4.6.	Phonological processing influences on second language acquisition . . . . .	51
1.4.6.0.	Introduction . . . . .	51
1.4.6.1.	Non-L1 based phonological strategies in L2 performance . . . . .	51
1.4.6.2.	Phonological processing in second language performance . . . . .	52
1.4.7.	The explanatory value of 'patterns of influence' . . . . .	53
1.5.	Patterns of variability . . . . .	55
1.5.0.	Introduction . . . . .	55
1.5.1.	Variationist studies of phonological acquisition in the Labov paradigm . . . . .	56
1.5.2.	Variationist studies of phonological acquisition within 'dynamic paradigm' and 'implicational' sociolinguistic models . . . . .	59
1.5.2.1.	Second language phonological acquisition as 'gradual diffusion' . . . . .	59
1.5.2.2.	Second language phonological acquisition as an 'implicational scale' . . . . .	60
1.5.2.3.	The explanatory value of variation analyses of second language phonological acquisition . . . . .	61
1.5.3.	Second language phonological variation in a variety grammar: the sonority principle . . . . .	63
1.6.	Patterns of learner language structure . . . . .	66

1.6.0.	Introduction . . . . .	66
1.6.1.	Learner phonology as a sui generis system . . . . .	67
1.6.2.	Learner phonology in the light of universal principles of natural language systems . . . . .	72
1.7.	Summary and conclusion . . . . .	75
Chapter II: THE LINGUISTIC ANALYSIS OF SECOND LANGUAGE
	PHONOLOGICAL ACQUISITION . . . . .	76
2.0.	Introduction . . . . .	76
2.1.	Conceptual issues in second language phonology: independence, systematicity, variability, (in)stability and deviance of learner systems . . . . .	77
2.2.	Ontological and analytical issues in second language phonology . . . . .	81
	2.2.1. Second language phonological rules and representa- tions and phonological processing . . . . .	81
	2.2.1.1. The underlying representations of IL's . . . . .	81
	2.2.1.2. Perception and production in (second language) phonological analysis . . . . .	83
	2.2.2. Analytical and descriptive categories for second language phonology . . . . .	88
	2.2.2.1. Heuristic vs. structural categories: words and sounds . .	88
	2.2.2.2. Heuristic categories in phonological learning: features .	91
2.3.	Theoretical and methodological issues in second language phonology . . . . .	95
	2.3.1. Phonological 'structure' and phonological 'processing' in linguistic theory . . . . .	95
	2.3.1.1. 'Structure' and 'processing': competence and performance . . . . .	95
	2.3.1.2. Second language processing as part of performance . .	98
	2.3.2. Generative grammar as a theory of language acquisition . . . . .	100
	2.3.2.1. Some basic assumptions of generative theory as a model of acquisition . . . . .	100
	2.3.2.2. The value of generative grammar as a theory of (second) language acquisition and development . . . . .	102
	2.3.2.3. Second language phonology in a (generative) theory of acquisition and development . . . . .	105
	2.3.2.4. The nature of linguistic 'experience' in (second) language acquisition and development . . . . .	107
	2.3.2.5. 'Processing' conditions for the acquisition and devel- opment of a (second) language . . . . .	108
	2.3.2.6. The role of the first language in second language development in a theory of FL ontogeny . . . . .	113
2.4.	Summary and conclusion . . . . .	116

Chapter III: THE PHONOLOGICAL GRAMMAR IN SECOND LANGUAGE DEVELOPMENT	118
3.0. Introduction . . . . .	118
3.1. General perspectives on phonological representations (and rules) . . . . .	118
3.2. Lexical representation . . . . .	120
3.2.1. General perspectives on lexical phonological representation . . . . .	120
3.2.2. The present model of lexical representation . . . . .	121
3.3. Prosodic representation . . . . .	125
3.3.1. General perspectives on prosodic representation: metrical phonological approaches . . . . .	125
3.3.1.1. Prosodic organization . . . . .	125
3.3.1.2. Prosodic constituents . . . . .	128
3.3.2. The present model of prosodic representation . . . . .	131
3.4. Rhythmic representation . . . . .	135
3.4.1. General perspectives on rhythmic representation: metrical grids . . . . .	135
3.4.2. The present model of rhythmic representation . . . . .	136
3.5. Phonetic representation . . . . .	139
3.5.1. General perspectives on phonetic representation . . . . .	139
3.5.2. The present model of phonetic representation . . . . .	142
3.6. Conclusion and perspectives on second language development .	144

Chapter IV: PHONOLOGICAL ACQUISITION AND LEARNING IN SECOND LANGUAGE DEVELOPMENT	148
4.0. Introduction . . . . .	148
4.1. Phonological acquisition and learning . . . . .	148
4.1.1. Learning without acquisition . . . . .	148
4.1.2. Acquisition via learning . . . . .	149
4.2. Lexical acquisition and learning . . . . .	151
4.3. Prosodic acquisition and learning . . . . .	153
4.4. Rhythmic acquisition and learning . . . . .	158
4.5. Phonetic acquisition and learning . . . . .	159
4.6. The influence of the native language (and other languages) in phonological learning and acquisition . . . . .	161
4.7. The interpretation of phonological acquisition: a sample data analysis . . . . .	165
4.7.1. Informant, topic and transcription . . . . .	165
4.7.2. The data . . . . .	166
4.7.3. Analysis of the data . . . . .	169
4.7.3.1. Lexical phonological acquisition . . . . .	169
4.7.3.2. Prosodic acquisition . . . . .	175

4.7.3.3.	Rhythmic acquisition . . . . .	180
4.7.3.4.	Phonetic acquisition . . . . .	181
4.8.	Structural mechanisms of linguistic change in second language phonological acquisition . . . . .	183
4.8.1.	Typologies of change: diachronic development, first language and second language acquisition . . . . .	183
4.8.2.	Phonological change: diachronic development and second language acquisition . . . . .	189
