

Contents

Foreword	page xi
1 The not uncommon tongue	1
Gallicisms	1
Angevin variants	2
The University of Paris	3
The results of the Hundred Years War	4
The invention of printing	5
The endless borrowing: 'français'	7
2 The Huguenots	8
England as asylum	8
The name and its significance	9
Huguenot interest in science	10
The University of Montpellier	11
The 'courtly academies' and the grand tour	12
The revocation of the Edict of Nantes 1681	12
The steam engine and technical training: the industrial boost	14
Anglomania and France	16
3 Groups and societies 1570-1790	18
Incubators of rationalism	18
Aggressive distribution of ideas: offices of address	19
Scientific journals	20
Anglo-French encyclopaedias	21
The secularising ethic of education	22
Chemistry	23
The perils of Francophilia	25
	vii

CONTENTS

4	The cult of Rousseau	page 27
	Émile and the soteriology of education	27
	Thomas Day's Sandford and Merton	28
	Richard Lovell Edgeworth and child study	29
	The Rev. David Williams and the new morality	31
	The revisionists: Pestalozzi	32
	Moniteurs and monitors	33
5	French revolutionary institutions	36
	Émigré Catholics and their schools in England	36
	The pro-revolutionary John Anderson and his 'university'	37
	The École Polytechnique and its Regent Street counterpart	39
	The real revolution: ð-ism replaces dot-age	40
	The Conservatoire des Arts et Métiers	41
	The concept of the 'normal' school	42
	The rise of professional training	43
	Travellers' tales	44
	The Imperial University of 1808 and its influence on Ireland and Wales	46
	The crown of the edifice: the Institut	48
6	The soteriology of education	50
	The Catholic reaction	50
	Guizot's influence in England	51
	St. Simonians in England	52
	The nineteenth century Edict of Nantes: the loi Falloux	54
	Christianising socialism	55
	'Timely preparation' M. Arnold's insurance against Americanisation	56
7	The triple scarecrow: secularism, sociology and scientism	60

	Jean Macé and the French National Education League	page 60
	Cardinal Manning's fears and actions	61
	Sociologism: Émile Durkheim, Le Play and Sir Patrick Geddes	64
	The industrial exhibitions and the spirit of emulation	65
	French provincial universities and their English counterparts	68
	English rationalist Francophiles	69
8	L'humanisme totale	71
	Budin, Binet and Braille	71
	Mandarinism in British science	73
	French pacemaking in electrical engineering	75
	French technology: the Corbusier 'modulor'	76
	L'École Normale and the French Left	78
9	Anglo-French technical co-operation	79
	The Entente and after	79
	The 1940 proposal for union and the Monnet Plan	80
	The Schuman Plan and Britain's reaction	81
	A Council of European Ministers	82
	The conversion to Europe	84
	Massé and English planning	85
	English adaptations of French technical training	87
	The European Technological Community	89
10	Multiformity in uniformity	90
	The minister's watch	90
	The baccalaureat and G.C.E.	92
	Anglo-French groups	93
	L'Europe fraternelle	95
	Guide to further reading	99
		ix