

Contents

Preface	1
1. LINGUISTIC ATTITUDES TO LANGUAGE	3
1.1. Introduction	3
1.2. Speech and writing	5
1.2.1. French adjective gender	10
1.2.1.1. Pedagogic considerations	12
1.3. Form and meaning	15
1.3.1. Pedagogic considerations	18
1.4. Descriptive accuracy	24
1.4.1. Phonetics	28
λ 1.4.1.1. 'Dropped' aitches	28
1.4.1.2. Weak forms in English	28
1.4.1.3. French nasal vowels	30
1.4.2. Grammar	30
1.4.2.1. Description not prescription	31
1.4.2.2. Tense and adverbs in English	31
1.5. Langue and Parole	33
1.5.1. Parallel decisions in language teaching	35
1.6. Summary	36
2. PHONETICS AND PHONOLOGY	38
2.1. Introduction: the teacher as a model	38
2.2. Intonation	41
2.2.1. Intonation in language teaching	44
2.3. Phonetics and phonology	46
2.3.1. Techniques of pronunciation teaching	54
2.3.1.1. The teaching of Spanish /e/	57
2.4. Generative phonology	62
2.5. Summary	66

3. GRAMMAR	68
3.1. Item and structure	68
3.1.1. The structural content of language teaching	73
3.1.1.1. The verb in English	75
3.1.1.2. Syllabuses	77
3.1.1.3. Text-books	82
3.2. Deep structure and the study of syntax	86
3.2.1. Syntax	90
3.2.1.1. Predicate complement constructions in English	91
3.2.1.2. Pedagogic implications	95
3.3. Units of language	100
3.3.1. Pedagogic example: the definite article in German	104
3.4. Summary	108
4. VOCABULARY	109
4.1. Grammar and vocabulary: a matter of priorities	109
4.2. The selection of vocabulary	112
4.3. Vocabulary and its acquisition	118
4.3.1. Denotation and connotation	119
4.3.2. Lexical structure: paradigmatic relations	124
4.3.3. Lexical structure: syntagmatic relations	126
4.3.4. Implications for the teaching of meaning	130
4.4. Summary	133
5. THE SOCIAL FUNCTION OF LANGUAGE	134
5.1. Social norms	134
5.1.1. Dialect	135
5.1.2. Register	136
5.1.3. The medium of communication	139
5.1.4. Status	141
5.1.5. Situation	143
5.1.6. The pedagogic significance of language variety	144
5.2. Individual intention and social function	146
5.3. The social status of non-native languages	149
5.3.1. Second language learning	150
5.3.2. Foreign language learning	153
5.3.3. Alternate language learning	156

5.4. Summary	159
6. THE PSYCHOLOGY OF LANGUAGE	160
6.1. Introduction	160
6.2. General theories of language acquisition	161
X 6.2.1. Behaviourism	161
6.2.1.1. Behaviourism in language teaching	164
X 6.2.2. Mentalism	168
6.2.2.1. Mentalism in language teaching	171
6.2.3. Mentalism or behaviourism?	174
6.3. Individual variation in language learning performance	177
6.3.1. Language aptitude	178
6.3.2. Motivation	180
6.3.2.1. Integrative and instrumental motivation	183
6.3.3. Age	185
X 6.4. Summary	188
7. ERROR AND THE MOTHER-TONGUE	190
7.1. The evidence of mother-tongue interference	190
7.1.1. Contrastive analysis	197
7.2. Other sources of error	199
7.3. The significance of error: a restatement	203
7.4. The application of contrastive information	204
7.5. Summary	206
8. LINGUISTICS AND THE SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF LANGUAGE TEACHING	207
8.1. Methodology as fashion	207
8.2. The problems of conducting empirical research into language teaching	209
8.3. The place of linguistics	215
8.3.1. The relation of linguistics to language teaching	217
8.3.1.1. Insights	217
8.3.1.2. Implications	220
8.3.1.3. Applications	222
8.3.1.4. Non-applications	225

viii CONTENTS

8.4. Conclusion: the value of linguistics	227
Key to transcriptions used	231
Recommended further reading	233
Index	239