

Contents

Foreword by Professor Katie Wales	9
Acknowledgments	11
Introduction	13
Chapter 1. ‘Pre-modernist’, ‘Modernist’ and ‘Postmodernist’? Critical Reviews of Middlemarch , Nostromo and Herzog	21
1.1. ‘Pre-modernism’, ‘Modernism’, and ‘Postmodernism’	21
1.2. A literary review of Middlemarch , Nostromo and Herzog	30
1.3. Conclusion: What are the merits of the comparative analysis?	46
Chapter 2. Descriptive Framework: The Relation between Polyphony and Focalization	49
2.1. What is a polyphonic text?	49
2.2. The writer’s alternatives for focalizer	51
2.3. The concept of focalization: focalizer and focalized	56
2.4. Identification of focalizer	60
2.5. Empathy and polyphony	78
2.6. Conclusion: The relation between focalizer and polyphonic text	81
Chapter 3: Polyphony and ‘Pre-modernism’? A Stylistic Analysis of Middlemarch	83
3.1. The characterization of Dorothea Brooke	86
3.2. The characterization of Mr Arthur Brooke	100
3.3. The characterization of the Reverend Edward Casaubon	115

3.4. The characterization of Tertius Lydgate	132
3.5. Conclusion	147
 Chapter 4:
A Mode of Polyphony in Nostromo under Modernist Influence	153
4.1. The general disposition of the narrator	155
4.2. The narrator's characterization of Nostromo	166
4.3. Captain Mitchell's unreliability in the characterization of Nostromo	183
4.4. Dr Monygham's (un)authentic characterization of Nostromo	196
4.5. Conclusion	219
 Chapter 5: A Stylistic Analysis of Herzog : A Mode of 'Postmodernist Polyphony'
5.1. The narrator's description of Herzog's character	230
5.2. Herzog's self-evaluation	238
5.3. Herzog and embedded focalization	260
5.4. Potential for Herzog's inner transformation	268
5.5. Conclusion	280
 Chapter 6: Conclusion: Modes of polyphony in Middlemarch , Nostromo , and Herzog
Glossary	295
Bibliography	303
Index	321