

Contents

Introduction.....	iii
Martin Smith and Megan Brickley
The geographical epicentre of the 1918 influenza pandemic.....	1
D. Ann Herring and Janet Padiak
Combining palaeopathological and historical evidence for health in the Crusades.....	9
Piers D. Mitchell
When hard work is disease: the interpretation of enthesopathies.....	17
Charlotte Henderson
Determination of useful incision mark characteristics for microscopic forensic analysis.....	27
Catherine Tennick, Jennie Robinson and Micheal Wysocki
“All the outward tinsel which distinguishes man from man will have then vanished...” an assessment of the value of post-medieval human remains to migration studies.....	41
Natasha Powers
Periapical voids in human jaw bones.....	51
Alan R. Ogden
Great Chesterford: a catalogue of burials.....	57
Sarah Inskip
Rickets in Victorian London: why treatment was ineffective for so long.....	67
Lisa Brent and Piers D. Mitchell
A morphometric approach to body mass estimation.....	79
Lisa Cashmore
Lacunae to fill: combining palaeopathological and documentary research in investigations of individuals from a post-medieval Swedish cemetery.....	85
Caroline Arcini
Tuberculosis of the shoulder in a Victorian girl: how the invention of radiographs overturned a diagnosis of hysteria...93
Amna Suliman and Piers D. Mitchell
External auditory exostosis “at the end of the world”: the southernmost evidence according to the latitudinal hypothesis.....	101
Paola Ponce, Gabriela Ghidini, Rolando González-José
West Butts Street cemetery, Poole: a small 18th century Baptist community.....	109
Jacqueline I. McKinley	