

Contents

List of Illustrations	x
List of Tables	xi
List of Abbreviations	xii

PART I. INTRODUCTION

Introduction	3
1. The Rise of the Mass Media: Modern Communications and Cultural Traditions in the Late Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries	11
A New Cultural Constellation: Producers, Consumers, and the Marketplace	11
The Commercial Press	20
Early Film	34
Conserving Sound: Phonograph and Gramophone	44
Cultural Authority and the Entertainment Market	52

PART II. TAMING MASS CULTURE: STRATEGIES OF CONTROL AND REFORM

Introduction	61
2. Reasserting Control: The Regulation of Mass Culture	63
‘Smut and Trash’: Censorship and Youth Protection in the Empire	63
Morality and Censorship in the Republic	74
State and Communal Ownership	82
3. Attempting Reform: Legitimation, Education, and Uplifting Tastes	87
Commercial Culture and Social Reform	88
New Media and New Genres	100

PART III. MASS CULTURE, DIVIDED AUDIENCES: MEDIA,
ENTERTAINMENT, AND SOCIAL CHANGE
IN THE WEIMAR REPUBLIC

Introduction	119
4. Technology and Purchasing Power: Media Availability and Audiences	121
Cinema Distribution and Household Budgets	122
New Technologies and New Listeners: Gramophone and Radio Audiences	128
5. Meeting Demand: Consumer Preference and Social Difference	141
Between Popular Appeal and Particularism: The Print Media	142
Edification and Amusement: Radio Programming and its Critics	150
Cinema Programmes and Film Preferences	156
6. Media Publics Between Fragmentation and Integration	163
Social Segregation and the Cinema	164
The Fractured Press	174
Listening in Public and Private	181

PART IV. MASS MEDIA AND MASS POLITICS FROM THE EMPIRE TO THE WEIMAR REPUBLIC

Introduction	191
7. Propaganda and the Modern Public	194
From Press Policy to 'Patriotic Education': State Propaganda in Imperial Germany	194
Propaganda, the Modern Public, and the Experience of Total War	204
Advertising, Mass Psychology, and the Power of Symbols	213
8. Republicans, Radicals, and the Battle of Images	223
Publicity for the Republic: From Propaganda to Instruction	224
The Radical Onslaught	234
Mainstream in Crisis: The Promise and Perils of Propaganda	246

PART V. MASS CULTURE IN THE THIRD REICH:
PROPAGANDA, ENTERTAINMENT, AND NATIONAL MOBILIZATION

Introduction	263
9. Political Control and Commercial Concentration Under the Nazis	266
National Socialist Restructuring of Media and Leisure	267
Commercial Concentration, Expansion, and the Talking Film	271
Radio and Recording: State Control and Media Convergence	279
The Print Media: Abolition, Steering, and Standardization	292
10. Entertaining the National Community	302
From Agitation to 'State Propaganda': Politics, Marketing, and Entertainment	304
'Film for All': Cinema and Society in the 1930s	311
Between Instrumentalization and Americanization: Press and Advertising	321
'Just don't be boring': Nazi Radio	330
11. The Media and the Second World War: From Integration to Disintegration	341
Defending the Attack: Nazi Remilitarization and the Media	342
A Virtual Volksgemeinschaft	346
Into the Collapse	363
Conclusion	380
Bibliography	393
Index	417

List of Illustrations

1. The face of the 'Generalanzeiger': Mosse's Berliner Morgen-Zeitung, 24 February 1891. 25
2. Eye-catching layout: Illustrierte Zeitung (Leipzig and Berlin), 7 October 1897. 29
3. The early 'Ladenkino': staff at the entrance to the Nord-Kino cinema in Berlin, c.1910. 39
4. Young Berlin couple pondering the purchase of a gramophone, late 1920s. 46
5. Typical Sachplakat: advertisement for Manoli Cigarettes, by Lucian Bernhard, 1914. 102
6. The 'miracle' of the wireless: listening via headphones to an early crystal wireless set in the garden, 1925. 135
7. Catering to every imaginable taste: newspaper kiosk in Berlin's Kaiserallee, 1932. 150
8. Cathedrals of cinematic refinement: palatial modern interior of the Universum-Kino on Berlin's Lehninerplatz. 165
9. Conspicuously 'American-style' editorializing advertisement for Elida soap, from Die Woche, vol. 28 (1926). 218
10. Propaganda parallels: the Nazi and KPD giants both promise to pulverize their enemies, 1932. 240
11. 'All Germany listens to the Führer': advertisement for the Volksempfänger at the 1936 Radio Exhibition. 285
12. The Führer as brand: poster for the plebiscite of 19 August 1934. 310
13. The adoption of 'reason why' advertising: comparison of two Kaloderma soap ads from Die Woche. 329
14. Ensuring that no one misses out: passers-by listening to a public Hitler broadcast in front of a radio store, 1936. 332
15. Entertaining the wartime 'national community': title cover of the book for the 'Request Show for the Wehrmacht', 1940. 357
16. Sold out: queueing for cinema tickets, 1942. 367
17. Ruins of the flagship Ufa-Palast am Zoo, 1945. 378

List of Tables

1. Growth of the press in Germany, 1885–1914	31
2. Number of newspaper editions per week, 1885–1914	31
3. Cinema availability in Germany, 1910–1935	123
4. Registered wireless sets in the German Reich, 1924–1933	134
5. Cinema admissions in Germany, 1925–1935	173
6. Feature films distributed in Germany, 1923–1940	279
7. Radio use in Germany, 1929–1941	287
8. Concentration of newspaper readership, 1932–1942	298
9. German film productions, 1933–1945	355
10. Registered wireless sets in the German Reich, 1933–1944	365
11. Cinema admissions in the German Reich (incl. annexations), 1928–1944	365