

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Introduction	9
Chapter 1 Counselling and young people: what now?	11
Counselling and pastoral care 18; Counselling and careers 20
Chapter 2 The advent of the counsellor	28
Guidance services in British schools 30; The form tutor 34
Chapter 3 What is counselling?	39
Theories of counselling 41; The elements in a counselling relationship 42; Testing 46; The counselling interview 46; What does counselling achieve? 48
Chapter 4 Establishing a counselling service	50
The organization of the school 51; Aims and principles 52; Role limitations 53; Reaching our clients 56; The structuring of the groups 59; The autobiographical note 63; The standard interview 64; Individual problems 65; Relationships between the school staff and the counsellor 66; The organization of staff/counsellor relationships in the school 72; Counselling and school records 74; Criticism of staff and school organization 77; Staff/group discussions 79; The counsellor's role in school policy 80; Conclusion 81.
Chapter 5 The adolescent world	82
Parents 82; Siblings 85; Grandparents 86; Friends 87; Sparetime activities 88; Ambitions 89; Adolescent moods and general comments 90; Group discussion of these points 92; Questions about sex 94; Individuals 99; Communication 100; Confidentiality 105; A friendly adult 107; support 109; conclusion 115.

Chapter 6 Action	116
Social services 121; Helping the parents 123; conclusion 133; Outside bodies 135; Parents 135; Interviews with parents 137; Other agencies 140; Referrals 144; The counsellor as go-between 145; The careers service 146; The head, the counsellor and the community 147; The counsellor's problem 148.
Chapter 7 The counsellor as educator	150
Counselling and teaching 151; Counsellors and teachers 152; The welfare team 153; Authority, role diffusion and boundaries: some dangers 153; Theory into practice 155; Integration of pastoral and academic 155; Preventive work in lower school 156; Alternative provision in lower school 156; The appointment of counsellors 157; The welfare team 157; Group work for staff; in-service training 158; support from the psychiatric services 158; The in-service training role of the deputy head 159; Counselling and administration 160; A counselling approach to headship 161; The single-parent child in the inner-city school 161; Pastoral care: myth, mystique, mistake or misunderstanding 164.
Chapter 8 New training initiatives	173
What are the aims of the school? 173; The school-to-work course 175; The rationale 176; Overall aim: meeting students' needs 176; Integration, support, negotiation, and progression 177; Evaluation 177; The course in detail 178; Overall view of the course; what we learned 183; The effects on the rest of the sixth-form curriculum 184
Chapter 9 Young people's responses	186
The school-to-work students 186; The trainees 195
Proscript	203
Appendix	204
Bibliography	219
Index	225