

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface	5
Table of Contents	7
List of Figures	13
List of Tables	14
1. Introduction	15
1.1. Outline/Summary of Major Themes, 20
2. Political Science as a Discipline: Topical, Conceptual, Systemic, and Analytical Approaches	29
2.1. Systems Analysis, 30
2.2. Topical and Subjective Approaches, 32
2.3. Public Policy Analysis and Decision Making, 35
2.4. The Utility of Models, 38
2.5. Utility of Systems/Policy Analysis for Integrative Purposes, 41
2.6. Other Models/Unifying Frameworks in Political Science - International Dimensions, 44
3. Political Socialization Research and Political Education: Do Meaningful Answers Exist?	49
3.1. Political Socialization and Education: Mixed Research Results, 62
3.2. Positive Effects of Political Education, 64
3.3. Negative/Null Effects on Political Education, 74
3.4. School, Television, and Politics: A Special Case, 91

4.	A Taxonomy for Civic/Political Education: Traditional U.S. Curricula in the 1960s	97
4.1.	Introduction, 97
4.1.1.	Background for Citizen Education Goals and Indices, 98
4.1.2.	The Need for a Comprehensive Index of Citizen Education, 100
4.1.3.	The Products -- Comprehensive Multi-Year Citizen Education Summary Grids, 100
4.2.	Educational Goals, 102
4.2.1.	Legal Statements, 102
4.2.2.	Other Goals Statements, 102
4.3.	Alternative Approaches to Index Construction, 104
4.3.1.	The "Copybook Civics" Approach, 106
4.3.2.	The Behavioral Approach To Effective Citizen Education (Formal and Informal), 109
4.3.3.	A Synthesis and Categorization of Goals for Effective Citizenship Education, 111
4.4.	Indices of Civic Education for the 1960s -- Sources, Procedures Used, and Results, 115
4.4.1.	Representative Goals Statements, 115
4.4.2.	Examples of Traditional Curricula, 116
4.4.3.	Examples of Innovative/Experimental Curricula, 116
4.4.4.	Textbook Summaries, 117
4.5.	Definition of Content Categories, 118
4.5.1.	Topical Content Areas of Civic Education, 118
4.6.	Domains of Instruction in Civic Education, 122
4.6.1.	Cognitive Domain, 122
4.6.1.1.	Knowledge, 122
4.6.1.2.	Understandings and Skills, 123
4.6.2.	Affective Domain, 124
4.6.3.	Activity or Behavioral Domain, 125
4.7.	A Taxonomy of Civic Education Indices for the 1960s and Summary Totals, 126
4.8.	Summary and Conclusions, 126
5.	A Taxonomy for Civic/Political Education: U.S. Curricula in the 1970s	131
5.1.	Trends in Political, Historical, and Social Education, 131
5.2.	The State of Social Studies in the 1970s: Constructive Variety or Destructive Proliferation?, 135

- 5.3. Teaching Climates, Methods, and Use of Innovative Social Studies Curricula, 138
- 5.4. Key Trends in Social Studies in the 1970s, 139
- 5.5. Student and Teacher Attitudes About Civics, Government, and Social/Political Studies, 140
- 5.6. Background Information and Basic Sources Used in the Conventional Political Education Taxonomy for the 1970s, 142
- 5.7. Results of Content Analysis: Methods, Curricula, Goals, and Textbooks, 153
 - 5.7.1. Methods Books, 153
 - 5.7.2. Curriculum Guides, 154
 - 5.7.3. Goals Statements, 154
 - 5.7.4. Textbooks, 154
- 5.8. The Master Grid of Political Goals, Methods, Curricula, and Textbooks: The 1970s, 155
- 5.9. Conclusions, 155

- 6. A Taxonomy for Civic/Political Education: A Case Study of Innovative U.S. Curricula in the 1970s and Major Trends in the 1980s.....159
 - 6.1. Introduction to this Survey of Innovative Curricula, 159
 - 6.2. Major Features of Experimental Curricula, 160
 - 6.2.1. Key Themes, 160
 - 6.2.2. Key Topics, 161
 - 6.2.3. Key Techniques for Teaching/Curriculum Packaging, 161
 - 6.2.4. Key Approaches to Learning, 162
 - 6.2.5. Key Target Groups, Age, and Ability Levels, 162
 - 6.2.6. Key Sector Responsibilities: Home, School, and the Larger Community, 163
 - 6.3. Some Neglected Areas in the New Curricula, 164
 - 6.4. Indices of Innovative Civic Education Curricula: Sources, Procedures, and Results Survey Innovative Materials, 166
 - 6.5. Some Generalizations About Innovative Political Curriculum Projects, 168
 - 6.6. An Overview of 24 Innovative Curriculum Projects, 172
 - 6.7. A Taxonomic Approach to the Content and Process Objectives of Innovative Civic Education Materials, 166
 - 6.8. Major Conclusions: Findings From Traditional and Innovative Curricula/Taxonomies (1960s and 1970s), 178

- 6.9. American Civics in the 1980s and 1990s: New Traditionalism, Major Trends, and Reconceptualization/Reconsolidation Efforts, 181
- 6.10. Are Civic Education Models and Taxonomies Applicable for National and Cross-National Analyses?, 199

7. Contemporary Perspectives on Political, Civic, and Citizenship Education: National and International Trends 203

- 7.1. Civic Education: Goals, Rationales, and Models, 204
 - 7.1.1. Political Science and Citizenship Education, 204
 - 7.1.2. Selected Models and Rationales for Political and Civic Education, 213
 - 7.1.3. The U.S. Citizenship National Assessment Model (1965). 213
 - 7.1.4. The U.S. Civics Assessment Model (1987), 215
 - 7.1.5. Butts's "ABC's"/Civic Education Model (1976), 215
 - 7.1.6. Newmann's Authentic, Moral, and Communitarian Model (1976), 218
 - 7.1.7. Department of Education Models, 218
- 7.2. American Political Education Curricula in the 1960s and 1970s, 221
- 7.3. Butts's Civic Values Decalogue (1980), 226
- 7.4. International/Cross-National Models/Rationales for Civic Education, 228
- 7.5. Contemporary Conceptions of Political Education: Civic Learning as Historical Revival, Political Problem, Participatory Decision Making, and Conflict Resolution, 235
 - 7.5.1. The Council for the Advancement of Citizenship and Civitas, 236
 - 7.5.2. Civic Learning as Historical Revival, 237
 - 7.5.3. The Education For Democracy Project, 243
 - 7.5.3.1. Strengths, 248
 - 7.5.3.2. Weaknesses, 248
 - 7.5.4. Civic Learning as a Political Problem in Sweden, 254
 - 7.5.5. Civic Learning as Participatory Decision Making, 259
 - 7.5.6. The Foundation For Teaching Economics, 261
 - 7.5.7. National Issues Forums, 263
 - 7.5.8. Civic Learning as Resolution of Public Problems/Conflicts, 266
 - 7.5.8.1. The Center for Civic Education, 266
 - 7.5.8.2. Foreign Policy Association/Great Decisions, 267

8.	Theoretical Contributions to Civic Education From Psychology, Political Socialization, Cognitive, Developmental, and Moral Education Research	269
8.1.	Models of Political Learning,	269
8.2.	Patterns of Political Learning,	272
8.3.	The Educational System and the Impact of the Schools on Political Socialization,	282
9.	Integrating Research Findings and Curricular Efforts in Political Science, Socialization, Education, and Social Sciences/Humanities	287
10.	Conclusions and Recommendations	301
10.1.	Major Themes/Interpretations,	301
10.2.	Significant Historical Elements Relevant to U.S. Civic Education,	302
10.3.	The American Public and Its Schools,	304
10.4.	U.S. Citizenship/Social Studies and U.S. History National Assessment Results,	306
10.5.	Civic Education for What?,	314
10.6.	Summary Comments, Interpretations, and Major Conclusions,	315
	10.6.1. Summary Comments/Interpretations,	315
	10.6.2. Major Conclusions for National and International Consideration,	318
10.7.	Major Recommendations for National and International Consideration,	327
11.	Epilogue: Some Challenges for Political Education and Public Policy in the 21st Century	333
11.1.	Cosmopolitanism,	333
11.2.	Environmentalism,	333
11.3.	Waging Peace,	334
11.4.	Economic Globalizism.	335
11.5.	Pluralism,	335
11.6.	Technology,	335
11.7.	Mass Media,	336
11.8.	Social Responsibility,	336
11.9.	Power,	337
11.10.	Transactional Politics,	337
11.11.	Population Control,	337

- 11.12. Solidarity, 338
- 11.13. International Human Rights, 338
- 11.14. Participatory Democracy, 338
- 11.15. Risk Assessment, 339
- 11.16. Democratic Education and Decision Making, 340

References 341