

CONTENTS

Foreword	10
Introduction	11
Chapter 1: FOUNDATIONS OF LIFELONG EDUCATION: SOME METHODOLOGICAL ASPECTS	15
R. H. Dave
1. Educational Challenges and Lifelong Education	15
2. Genesis of the Present Study	19
3. Objectives and Scope of the Study	23
3.1 About interdisciplinarity	25
3.2 International character of the study	26
4. About Methodological Aspects	27
5. Composition of the Study Team	28
6. Working Procedure	29
7. Nature of the Content	30
8. General Operational Steps	33
8.1 The concept of lifelong education	34
8.2 Identification of relevant aspects and concepts of selected disciplines	36
8.2.1 Evidence of comprehensive coverage	42
8.2.2 An inventory for future use	43
8.3 Derivation of perspectives and guidelines	43
8.4 Organization and presentation of the findings	45
9. Summary	45
Notes	48
Appendix I	51
Appendix II	53

Chapter 2: LIFELONG EDUCATION – SOME PHILOSOPHICAL ASPECTS	57
Bogdan Suchodolski
1. Origin of Lifelong Education	58
2. The Present Situation of Lifelong Education and Future Strategies	65
3. The Problem of Overcoming Alienation by Means of Lifelong Education	71
4. The Prospects for Man in a Society Centred upon Production and Consumption	79
5. Humanism and the Philosophy of Lifelong Education	89
Notes	96
Chapter 3. HISTORICAL STUDIES AND THE FOUNDATIONS OF LIFELONG EDUCATION	97
P. N. Kirpal
1. The Emerging Concept of Lifelong Education	97
1.1 A crisis of contemporary civilization	98
1.2 The concept of lifelong education	98
1.2.1 Expansion	99
1.2.2 Innovation	99
1.2.3 Integration	100
1.3 The origin of lifelong education	101
1.3.1 Needs	101
1.3.2 Modalities	103
1.3.3 Objectives	105
1.4 The relevance of history	108
2. History and Lifelong Education	109
2.1 The idea of lifelong education in history	109
2.2 Contemporary patterns and problems of historical studies	115
2.3 New dimensions in history: the larger view	117
2.4 The place of history in lifelong education	120
2.4.1 The idea of lifelong education in history	121
2.4.2 History and the search for the meaning of life	121
2.4.3 History and human affairs	121
2.4.4 History as a discipline of the mind	122
2.4.5 History and human growth	123
2.4.6 History and learning motivations	123

2.4.7 History as a mode of thought and guide to action	124
2.4.8 History and cultural learning	124
2.4.9 History as personal experience	125
Notes	126
Additional Sources	127
Chapter 4: THEORETICAL FOUNDATIONS OF LIFELONG EDUCATION: A SOCIOLOGICAL PERSPECTIVE	129
Henri Janne
1. Sociology and Lifelong Education	129
1.1 The challenge to sociology	129
1.2 Potential contributions of sociology in the field of social relations	130
1.2.1 The theory of interpersonal relations	131
1.2.2 The theory of social groups	131
1.2.3 Theories of personality	132
1.2.4 Theories and research relevant to some key phenomena	134
1.2.5 General mechanisms for the maintenance of social relations	134
1.2.6 Sociological findings concerning "social change"	135
1.2.7 Some "specialized sociologies"	137
1.3 Potential contributions of macro-sociology	139
1.3.1 Systems approach	139
1.3.2 Two major orientations of the systems approach in sociology (functionalism and Marxism)	140
1.3.3 Use of models	145
2. Outline of a Sociological Theory of Lifelong Education	146
2.1 The crisis in industrialized societies	146
2.2 Dead-ends and limits of the traditional educational system	149
2.2.1 Function of the system: reproduction of social structures	149
2.2.2 The dead-end of equality of opportunity	150
2.2.3 The changing requirements of the system regarding technical and scientific skills and their educational implications	151
2.2.4 The growing and diversified needs of the tertiary sector	154
2.2.5 Structure of the educational system and structure of the working population	156
2.2.6 "Isolated" education in "isolated" culture	159
2.3 Necessity for and significance of lifelong education	161

2.3.1 Industrialized societies	161
2.3.2 Developing societies	164
2.4 The dilemma of lifelong education: to condition man or free him	166
2.5 The guidance principle and lifelong education	167
2.6 Decentralization, central coordination and lifelong education	170
2.7 Conclusion	172
2.7.1 Changing the "condition humaine" through lifelong education	172
2.7.2 The methodological aspect	176
Notes	177
References	179
Appendix: Four Prospective Types (or Models) of Social System	182
Chapter 5: SOME PSYCHOLOGICAL REFLECTIONS ON LIFELONG EDUCATION	186
A. J. Cropley
1. Structure of the Analysis	186
1.1 The role of psychology	186
2. A Challenge to Modern Education	187
2.1 The challenge of change	187
2.2 Change and the changing concept of knowledge	187
2.3 Need for education to be concerned with self-actualization	188
2.4 Educational needs of adults	189
2.5 Education and early childhood	189
2.6 The search for educational equality	190
2.7 The response - lifelong education	191
3. Defects of Present Educational Systems	192
3.1 Cognitive development, knowledge, and vocational skills	192
3.2 Interpersonal relationships and social roles	193
3.3 Intrapsychic development	194
3.4 Emotional and motivational development	195
4. Characteristics of Lifelong Education	196
4.1 Continuousness of growth	196
4.2 Needs of the very young	196
4.3 Needs of adults	197
4.4 Co-ordination of psychological domains	198
4.5 Education for personal growth	199
4.6 Education for social development	200
4.7 Education for equity	200

5. Psychological Basis of Lifelong Education	201
5.1 Change as a psychological "threat"	202
5.2 Intellectual functioning throughout life	205
5.3 Learning beyond conventional school age	207
5.4 Vertical and horizontal integration in cognitive functioning	209
5.5 The role of childhood in psychological development	211
5.6 Vertical and horizontal integration in social development	214
5.7 Vertical and horizontal integration in intrapsychic development	216
5.8 Integration of motives, goals and aspirations	218
6. Implications for Curriculum	221
6.1 Can schools develop lifelong learners?	221
6.2 A lifelong curriculum for schools	222
6.3 The teacher in lifelong education	223
6.4 Curriculum for the very young	224
6.5 Curriculum for beyond conventional school age	225
6.6 Curriculum for work	226
6.7 Curriculum for life itself	226
References	228
 Chapter 6: ANTHROPOLOGICAL AND ECOLOGICAL FOUNDATIONS OF LIFELONG EDUCATION	 235
C. De'Ath
1. Introduction	235
2. The Approach	240
3. Substantive Areas and Themes	243
4. The Anthropological View of Schools and Education	245
5. The Existential Self and Global Problems	246
6. Survival Environments	247
7. Technology and Built Environments	250
8. Growth and Life Cycles	254
9. Primates and Foraging Societies	258
10. Alternative Life Styles	265
11. Communication	265
12. Commitment and Human Scale	274
13. Acculturation and Enculturation	277

NOTES	282
ADDITIONAL SOURCES	283
GLOSSARY	284
 Chapter 7: ECONOMIC ANALYSIS OF LIFELONG EDUCATION	 286
Annie Vinokur
1. Introduction	286
2. Lifelong Education in the Perspective of "Human Resources" Theories	289
2.1 The "human capital" model and lifelong education	291
2.1.1 Theory of micro-decisions on investment in education	292
a) The worker's calculus	292
b) The employer's calculus	298
2.1.2 Macro-economic analysis: Education and economic growth	301
2.2 Contribution of the filter theories	305
2.2.1 The educational system as an information/selection system for employers	306
2.2.2 The demand for schooling and the "snowball" phenomenon	309
2.2.3 Policy implications of the model	311
3. Elements of an Alternative Approach to the Economic Aspects of Lifelong Education	313
3.1 The analytical framework	314
3.2 Contradictions between the collective reproduction of the qualified labour force and lifelong education	318
3.3 Lifelong education and the social division of labour	325
Notes	328
 Chapter 8: ILLUSTRATIVE CONTENT ANALYSIS AND SYNTHESIS	 338
R. H. Dave
1. General Purposes of the Chapter	338
2. Analysis and Synthesis of the Foundation Content	338
2.1 Purpose of the content analysis	338
2.2 Procedure	339
2.2.1 Nature of the content analysis	339
2.2.2 Content categories and recording units	339

2.2.3	Major steps	341
2.2.4	Use of the materials	341
2.3	Some observations about the method	342
3.	Intradisciplinary Analysis	342
3.1	Philosophical foundations	343
3.1.1	General perspectives - the transformation of life in its totality	343
3.1.2	Obstacles and preconditions - the "education-centred" society	343
3.1.3	Communication of values through art - a major content of education	344
3.2	Historical foundations	345
3.2.1	Transcendence to a new humanism - a perspective of lifelong education	345
3.2.2	A new quality of life - the goal of lifelong education	345
3.3	Sociological foundations	347
3.3.1	The goal of lifelong education - people who make responsible choices	347
3.3.2	The structure of lifelong education - reintegration and flexibility	348
3.4	Psychological foundations	348
3.4.1	"Immigrants" in our own societies - the need for lifelong education	348
3.4.2	Profiting from uncertainty - the process of lifelong education	349
3.5	Anthropological and ecological foundations	350
3.5.1	Understanding global systems - a factor in lifelong education	350
3.5.2	Communication - processes, content and structures of lifelong education	351
3.6	Economic foundations	352
3.6.1	General perspectives - formal analysis of lifelong education	352
3.6.2	Transforming the economic structure of society	352
4.	Interdisciplinary Synthesis	353
4.1	Need, scope and significance of lifelong education	354
4.1.1	Change and the problem of its effects	355
4.1.2	The changing relationship of man, social organizations and technology	355
4.1.3	The crisis of contemporary civilization	356
4.1.4	Lifelong education as a response	356

4.2 The practicability of lifelong education	359
4.2.1 Personal growth throughout life	359
4.2.2 The means of lifelong education - communications and mass media	360
4.3 Obstacles and preconditions for lifelong education	361
4.3.1 Changed conceptualization of education	361
4.3.2 Obstacles in the structure of society	362
4.3.3 The problem of inertia in large systems	364
4.3.4 The need to develop the inclination to learn	364
4.3.5 Education as a prerequisite for itself	365
4.4 The goals of lifelong education	365
4.4.1 Conventional goals	365
4.4.2 Goals that need renewed emphasis	366
4.4.3 Goals of central importance	366
4.4.4 "Instrumental goals" of lifelong education	368
4.5 Guidelines for the content of lifelong education	369
4.5.1 Nature of the content of lifelong education	369
4.5.2 Scope of the content of lifelong education	369
4.5.3 The content of formal learning	370
4.5.4 Guidelines for selected content areas	371
4.6 Learning processes, materials, media and strategies	372
4.6.1 Learning modes and skills	372
4.6.2 Learning situations and their integration	373
4.6.3 Flexibility in learning	373
4.6.4 Learning strategies and educational technology	374
4.6.5 Motivation - an indispensable prerequisite for learning throughout life	375
4.7 Structures and organization	375
4.7.1 Structure of school-based education	375
4.7.2 Special formal structures of learning	376
4.7.3 Informal structures of learning	377
5. Suggestions for Further Analysis	377
6. Suggestions for the Use of the Findings	378
7. Some Implications for Further Studies	380
8. In Conclusion	381