

Contents

List of figures	x
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	1
1 New ground	5
Skilled acts are rooted in tacit knowledge ·     Apprenticeship and the field of discovery · On the beach:     the solitary explorer
2 Education – making space for instruction	20
Knowing what is and what might be · Room to be and to     become · Games and play · The dancers · Structure and     instruction · Approaching the frontier
3 Things for use and things for meaning: tools and symbols	39
Toys, tools and symbols · The creative cycle: things for     use · The creative cycle: things for meaning · The     oscillation between familiar and unfamiliar · The symbol     as a focus of meaning · Picturing and story-telling may     have evolved together
4 Competence	62
Competence and motivation · Freedom from and freedom     for . . . · The act of discovery in slow motion · Feeling ·     Competence and tacit knowledge
5 The four roles of a teacher	81
Role theory · Playing the fool · Judging · In-structing ·     Prophesying

viii	Playing and exploring
6	Embodied form The sources of orderliness · A problem of contingency: 'Did you create that or find it?' · A bent for achievement: the upward slope	99
7	Many-levelled theory A two-dimensional model · Moving from one mode of representation to the next · The potency of words and diagrams	116
8	Divided brain, uniting mind The integrative mind · Early experiments on split brains · Two eyes for seeing in depth; two brains for thinking in depth · The inside and the outside channel · Fine skills and language · Education of the whole	139
9	Words and images Visual dope · Pictures for telling stories from · Other kinds of iconic learning	168
10	Success for all children Education 2000	187 189
	Postscript: On human talents	204
	Bibliography	209
	Index	221