

Contents

Introduction	page xi
1 Behaviourist Foundations and Approaches to Pedagogy	1
1.1 A Typical Characterisation of a Traditional Classroom	4
1.2 The Behaviourist Perspective: General Principles	7
1.3 Classical Behaviourism: Pavlov's Dogs	16
1.4 Operant Behaviourism: Skinner's Pigeons	22
2 Behaviourism and the Philosophy of Language	45
2.1 Locke, Universals and Innate Ideas	46
2.2 Quine's Logical Behaviourism and Classical Empiricism	51
2.3 Quine and Objectivity: the Indeterminacy of Translation	59
2.4 The Early Wittgenstein and Logical Behaviourism	68
2.5 Quine and the Later Wittgenstein on Universals	73
3 Skinner's Conflicting Paradigms of Science	88
3.1 Empiricist Approaches to Science	88
3.2 Empiricism and the Problem of Induction	90
3.3 Einstein's Probability and Skinner's Determinism	94
3.4 Behaviourism and Evolutionary Theory	101
3.5 Hume's Problem of Induction and Einstein's Revolution	112

3.6	Summary and Further Conclusions: Quine's Weak Empiricism	119
4	Behaviourism: Curricular Deductions	126
4.1	Aims and Objectives: Bloom's Taxonomy	128
4.2	Teaching Science: the Taxonomy of Learning Photosynthesis	131
4.3	Empiricist Historiography and the Jesus of History	137
4.4	Behaviourist Historiography and Hitler's 'Final Solution'	139
4.5	Morals, Religion and Aesthetics: Bloom's 'Affective' Domain	143
4.6	Cognitive and Affective Aims and Classical Empiricism	148
4.7	Conditioning, Reductionism and Exhaustive Quantification	157
4.8	Indoctrination, Reductionism and Exhaustive Quantification	159
4.9	Affective and Cognitive States: Concluding Remarks	163
5	Marxist Alternatives	166
5.1	A Typical Characterisation of a Marxist Alternative to the Traditional School	166
5.2	The Marxist Perspective: General Principles	169
5.3	Classical Marxism and the Nature of Reality	171
5.4	The Phenomenological Alternative to Classical Marxism	181
5.5	Freudian Psychoanalysis and Phenomenological Marxism	188
5.6	Freudian Reinterpretations of Classical Marxism: Dialectical Solutions	200
5.7	Marxism and the Psychoanalytic Model: Persistent Incoherencies	207
6	Classical and Phenomenological Marxist Pedagogy	219
6.1	General Features of a Marxist Critique of Schooling	219

6.2	Young's Critique of the Schooling of Science	229
6.3	Hand's Critique of the Schooling of English	243
6.4	Models, Reality and Curriculum Decisions: Some Conclusions	249
7	Bernstein, Hirst and Rule-Following Models	253
7.1	A Typical Characterisation of the 'Consensus Curriculum'	253
7.2	Bernstein's Durkheimian Model of Educational Change	256
7.3	The Durkheimian Model: Some Criticisms	266
7.4	Hirst's Theory and the Durkheimian Perspective	280
8	Forms of Knowledge, Categorical Concepts and Linguistic Universals	284
8.1	Chomsky and the Theory of Linguistic Universals	284
8.2	Hirst's Thesis and Wittgenstein's Language-Games	292
8.3	The Basis for Objectivity and the Fact of Change	294
8.4	'Truth' or 'Objectivity' as Meaning 'What is Testable against a Given Social Backcloth?'	297
8.5	A Pre-Linguistic Form of Life as an Alternative to Deep-Structure	303
8.6	Analogical Inference, Extension and Implicit Knowledge of Rules	308
8.7	The Analogical Inference/Extension Distinction	310
8.8	Freudian Examples and Unconscious Knowledge-That	311
8.9	Rule-Following Reformulations of Freud and the Role of Forgetting	318
8.10	The Coherence of the Postulate of Innate Endowment	322
9	Categorical and Substantive Concepts, Morphemes and Family-Resemblance	326

10	Conclusions: Multicultural Education and the Place of Religion	344
	Bibliographical References	354
	Index	360