

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	xi

Introduction	The scope of the text	1
	Development studies and education	3
	Geography and education	4
	People and education in the Third World	5
	A personal perspective	8
Chapter 1	The private and public demand for education	12
	Private demand	13
	Public demand	20
	Voices of dissent	25
Chapter 2	Global patterns of education	31
	Closing the global gap in enrolments	34
	Girls' enrolment	44
	International comparisons of quality	47
	Expenditure on education	50
	Global issues	52
Chapter 3	The geography of educational provision: the national scale	60
	Schools as economic phenomena	61
	Schools and the political system	64
	Schools and society	65
	Schools and culture	67
	The education system as a geographical phenomenon	68
	National patterns of enrolment	72
	Explanations of national patterns of inequality	80
	The diffusionist paradigm	80
	The underdevelopment paradigm	84
	Reducing equality	86
	Regional inequality: challenge or opportunity?	91
Chapter 4	The local scale: the school and the community	92
	Schools and the geography of social provision	93

viii Contents

The journey to school	96
Population threshold and the size of school	101
Technical and political conflicts	104
Schools and the rural community	109
Vocational schools and rural development	117
Local management issues	121

Chapter 5 Education and population growth 123

Education and fertility	125
How education changes the value of children	125
Education in population policies	127
Education and mortality	134
Education and the demographic transition	141

Chapter 6 Human resource development 146

Education and human resource development	147
Manpower planning and the diploma disease	152
Northern Areas of Pakistan	154
Western Province, Kenya	163
Policies for human resource development	168

Chapter 7 Education and migration 170

Internal migration: selectivity by education	173
International migration: the brain drain	191

Chapter 8 Models of education and models of development 202

References	212
Index	227