

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgements	ix
The materials from the Environmental Studies Project (5-13)	x
1 The context of the evaluation
The project—its nature and outcomes	1
The project—its organization and principal phases	4
The evaluation	6
2 The study of outcomes
Design of the investigation	10
Results	13
3 The study of contributing factors
Design of the investigation	19
Results	21
4 The study of acceptability
The problem	33
Design of the investigation	33
Discussion of major issues	36
Summary	45
5 General comments and summary
The nature of the conclusions drawn	47
General observations about the project	48
Interpretations of data obtained in the three special studies	49
Summary	50

Appendices

A	Stages of the project's work	51
B	The Bristol Achievement' Tests	54
C	Production of the map test	56
D	Sampling procedure	60
E	Questionnaires for study of contributing factors—with frequency counts	63
F	Likert scale for assessment of attitudes to the use of informal methods	84
G	List of contingency tables constructed	86
H	Revised schedule for acceptability discussions	90
J	The interviewing programme	92

Tables

1	Means and standard deviations of raw test scores of primary pupils	14
2	Comparison of Bristol test means with norms, for primary pupils working in English	17
3	Intercorrelations between mental age and scores on the two tests	17
4	Size of project schools	21
5	Proportions of men and women in project schools and other schools	22
6	Numbers of classes in different age groups	22
7	Age distribution of teachers involved in the project	23
8	Distribution of scores on attitude to informal methods scale	23
9	Subjects with which project teachers felt able to deal adequately	23
10	Data concerning project school performance	24
11	Answers to questions concerning project teacher performance	25
12	Contingency tables for pairs of variables	27
13	Three-dimensional contingency tables: validity of EVS work against sex, with age held constant	31
14	Three-dimensional contingency tables: validity of EVS work against age, with sex held constant	31
15	Bristol Achievement Test: norms for level 3	55
16	Bristol Achievement Test: norms for level 5	55