

Table of contents

Introduction	VII
Joan Bybee and Mickey Noonan
Main clauses are innovative, subordinate clauses are conservative: Consequences for the nature of constructions	1
Joan Bybee
Participles in Tsez: An emergent word class?	19
Bernard Comrie
Mini-grammars of some time-when expressions in English	31
Charles J. Fillmore
Denial and the construction of conversational turns	61
Cecilia E. Ford
On the embodied nature of grammar: Embodied being-in-the-world	79
Barbara A. Fox
The symmetry of counterfactuals	101
John Haiman and Tania Kuteva
Note on the grammar of Turkish nominalizations	125
Pelin Hennesy and T. Givón
Hendiadys and auxiliiation in English	145
Paul Hopper
“Sentence” in spontaneous spoken Japanese discourse	175
Shoichi Iwasaki and Tsuyoshi Ono
Some issues concerning the origin of language	203
Charles N. Li
Are subordinate clauses more difficult?	223
Carol Lord

Combining clauses into clause complexes: A multi-faceted view Christian M. I. M. Matthiessen	235
Overwrought utterances: "Complex sentences" in a different sense Emanuel A. Schegloff	321
Publications by Sandra A. Thompson	337
Language index	347
Name index	351
Subject index	357