

Contents

FOREWORD by Sara Friedrichsmeyer	ix
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	xi
INTRODUCTION: Representations of the Other	1
Postcolonial Representations of Ethnic Minorities	6
Germanness and Austrianness: Ethnicity, Gender, and Nation	13
1. A Philippine, Postcolonial Other in Kerstin Specht's Lila	21
Articulate and Inarticulate Postcolonial Characters	22
Lila as a Critical Volksstück	26
Old and New Stereotypes	28
The Body at the Center of the Conflict	32
2. Vietnamese, Poles, and Turkish-Germans in Elfriede Müller's Goldener Oktober	39
Vietnamese and East German Women	43
East Germans, West Germans, and Ethnic Minorities	47
Neo-Nazis and Proud Germans	49
Turkish-Germans and Poles	51
3. African Asylum-Seekers and German Kurds in Bettina Fless's Asyl	57
The Nigerian Asylum-Seeker and Postcolonial Criticism	61
The Asylum Debate in Unified Germany	65
Soccer, Nationalism, and Allusions to National Socialism	68
Sexuality, Women, and Racism	72
4. A Female Gypsy in Gundl Ellert's Jagdzeit	81
Stereotyping of Others	87
Female Victimizers	93
Schiller's Räuber and Ellert's Neo-Nazi Robbers	96
Generational Conflicts and Racism	99
5. A Moroccan Bedouin in Marlene Streeruwitz's Bagnacavallo	103
Intertextual References	105
Postcolonial Critique	107
The Transformation of an Inarticulate Character	109
Colonial Clichés and Women's Solidarity	115
6. Roma in Elfriede Jelinek's Stecken, Stab und Stangl	123
Spokesperson for the Less Advantaged	125
Artistic Rendering of a Hate Crime	130
Contemporary Xenophobia and the Holocaust	133
Paul Celan: A Voice of the Holocaust Victims	137
CONCLUSION	143
NOTES	153
BIBLIOGRAPHY	171
INDEX	187