CONTENTS

Preface .................................................. xi
Introduction ............................................. 1

PART ONE. CONSTRUCTING AUTHORITY:
GELLIOUS’ ROMAN CULTURAL PROGRAMME

Chapter One. Gellius the Roman Educationalist ............... 17
  The Praefatio: Protocols of Authority ....................... 17
  The Roman life of learning: Gellius versus ‘the Greeks’ .... 24
  Vindicating elite authority: Gellius against the grammatici . 28
  Imagery of education: breastfeeding and pure Latinity .... 32

Chapter Two. Memory and Authority .......................... 37
  Commentarii and chreiai: the utility of commemoration .... 37
  The instability of Fronto’s charismatic authority .......... 39
  Playful authority (1): Menippean lists and imperial memory . 46
  Playful authority (2): Frontonian trifles and imperial education . 51
  ‘Gellius Menippus’: emulating Fronto as arbiter of taste .... 58

Chapter Three. Saturnalian Licence and Socratic Irony ........ 67
  Legitimate space for jest: Gellius as sectator ............. 67
  Scrutinising Socratic exposure .......................... 71
  Instructive role-reversals: obnoxius (6, 17) ............... 76
  The definition of penus (4, 1): Gellius’ authoritative platform .... 87

PART TWO. PLAYING WITH REPUTATIONS:
‘REHABILITATION’ AS POLITICAL SATIRE

Chapter Four. Favorinus as a ‘Comic Authority Figure’ ....... 97
  The chreia and the rhetoric of humour ..................... 97
  Favorinus and Socrates: ambiguous physiognomies ........ 100
  Socratic self-exposure .................................. 104
  Gellius’ politics of rehabilitation ........................ 106
Chapter Five. Exposing his Own Infamy: Avarice and Unmanliness .................................................. 113
The ‘double bind’ of Roman manhood ........................................... 113
Avarice as disloyalty towards the state ...................................... 118
Philology as a vehicle of satire (3, 1; 3, 19) .............................. 120
Ambiguous gender (penus), ambiguous amicus (4, 1) ............. 126

Chapter Six. Demonstration and Refutation: ‘Investigational Rhetoric’ ......................................................... 135
Authorising humour: enthymeme and antithesis .......................... 135
Exposing demagoguery and deception: Gellius on contio (18, 7) ...... 138

Chapter Seven. Favorinus’ Controversial Authority ...................... 155
Favorinus’ programmatic role ......................................................... 155
Things without honour: the paradox of praising a sophist ............ 156
The controversiality of Academic Scepticism ............................... 160
Stereotyping the polymath rival (20, 1; 14, 6) ............................. 170
The manly advice of a eunuch (14, 2) ........................................ 174
Subversive authority: Favorinus and Socrates ............................. 178

PART THREE. GELLIUS’ IDEOLOGICAL AUTHORITY: THE CHARISMA OF ANTQUNITAS IN A SOPHISTIC CONTEXT

Chapter Eight. The Imperial Context of Gellius’ Authority ............ 193
Modesty and caution in addressing the powerful .......................... 193
Ideal reader, existimatio: the emperor’s omnipresence ................. 198
(1) tedium: ‘rankling disgust’ ...................................................... 199
(2) the ambiguous rhetoric of philological topics .......................... 203
(3) existimatio: canonisation and elite formation .......................... 207

Chapter Nine. Gellius’ Symbouleutic Authority .......................... 215
The amicus minor and the amicus maior ....................................... 215
Noctes Atticae as praecpta generalia for a iudex (14, 2) ............... 221
The twilight zone between friendship and politics (1, 3) ............... 229
Gellius’ consilium as a ‘politics of candour’ ................................. 233

Chapter Ten. Comparative Judgments in Roman Sites of Memory 237
Shaping perceptions: space, comparison, and the gaze .................. 237
Imperial monuments and texts as ‘transmitters of memory’ .......... 239
Monumental writers under imperial scrutiny .............................. 241
Imperial education: Cato the Elder as a political exemplum ....... 246
The best of both worlds: Cato the Elder as the better sophist .... 252
Cato the Elder, the eloquent philosopher-statesman (6, 3) ........... 258
Gellius’ political consilium in an Antonine context .................. 264

Chapter Eleven. Comparative Judgments in Greek Sites of Memory ........................................................................... 269
Herodes Atticus’ controversial personality .......................... 269
Herodes’ villa, symbol of seduction and conflict ................. 272
The uncontrolled statesman under imperial control ............ 282
The ambitious sophist and the subversive philosopher (9, 2) .... 288
Herodes the tyrant and the liberators of Athens ................. 296
Gellius’ political satire as a sign of the times ..................... 310

Conclusion: Constructing Cultural and Political Continuity .... 313

Bibliography ........................................................................ 323
Index Locorum ....................................................................... 333
Index Nominum et Rerum .................................................... 345
Index Verborum Latinorum et Graecorum ............................ 359