

CONTENTS

Acknowledgements	vii
Foreword: The arguments of the book	ix
Part I Orality and Literacy
1 The orality of the octosyllabic rhymed couplet	4
2 Oral and written traditions in the early Tristan material: Bérroul, Thomas and Marie de France	26
3 The poet of the Roman de Thèbes : Clerc or ménéstrel ?	47
4 Chrétien de Troyes as minstrel: Further reflections on orality and literacy in twelfth century French courts	86
Part II Performance
5 Voice in medieval romance: The case of Chrétien de Troyes	139
6 Modalities of performance: Romance as recited, sung and played; romance as read	164
7 On the “memory-friendliness” of verse romance	228
8 On the advantages of a performance-oriented approach to medieval romance	267
Bibliography	285
Index	303