

1	The Nature of Universal Grammar	1
1.1	The early development of Universal Grammar Theory	2
1.2	Relating 'sounds' and 'meanings'	4
1.3	The computational system	8
1.4	Questions for linguistics	11
1.5	General ideas of language	13
1.6	Linguistic universals	20
1.7	The evidence for Universal Grammar Theory	24
1.8	Conclusion	26
2	Principles, Parameters and Language Acquisition	28
2.1	Principles and parameters	28
2.2	Language acquisition	45
3	Structure in the Government/Binding Model	61
3.1	The heart of the Government/Binding Model	62
3.2	Modules, principles and parameters	62
3.3	X-bar Theory in Government and Binding	73
3.4	Theta Theory	80
3.5	Control Theory and null subjects	86
3.6	Further developments in X-bar Theory	100
3.7	Summary	118
4	Movement in Government/Binding Theory	121
4.1	An overview of movement	121
4.2	Further developments to the theory of movement	133
4.3	Bounding, Barriers and Relativized Minimality	139
4.4	Case Theory	146
4.5	Binding Theory	162
4.6	Beyond S-structure and the Empty Category Principle	175

5	Chomskyan Approaches to Language Acquisition	185
5.1	The physical basis for Universal Grammar	185
5.2	A language learning model	189
5.3	The innateness hypothesis	204
5.4	The role of Universal Grammar in learning	205
5.5	Complete from the beginning or developing with time?	207
5.6	Issues in parameter setting	209
5.7	Markedness and language development	215
6	Second Language Acquisition and Universal Grammar	221
6.1	The purity of the monolingual argument	221
6.2	Universal bilingualism	222
6.3	The multi-competence view	223
6.4	The poverty-of-the-stimulus argument and second language acquisition	224
6.5	Models and metaphors	228
6.6	Hypotheses of the initial second language state	231
6.7	The final state of second language acquisition	238
7	Structure in the Minimalist Program	242
7.1	From Government/Binding to the Minimalist Program	243
7.2	Basic minimalist concepts	249
7.3	Phrase structure in the Minimalist Program	255
7.4	Thematic roles and structural positions	262
7.5	Adjunction	265
7.6	Linear order	268
8	Movement in the Minimalist Program	271
8.1	Functional heads and projections	271
8.2	The motivation for movement	275
8.3	The nature of movement	279
8.4	Overt and covert movement	281
8.5	Properties of movement	287
8.6	Phases	301
8.7	Conclusion	308
	References	310
	Index	319