

Contents

Introduction	1
Chapter One: Defining Self-Deception	17
1. Belief and the Motivation to Believe	17
2. Types of Motivation for Self-Deception	23
3. Mental Strategies	27
4. Self-Deception and Related Mental States	29
Chapter Two: Paradoxes of Self-Deception and Their Solutions	34
1. Freud, Sartre, and Self-Deception	34
2. The Paradoxes of Self-Deception	39
3. Proposed Solutions to the Paradoxes	46
3.1 Cognitive Solutions	46
3.2 Logico-Linguistic Solutions	48
3.3 An Existential Solution	50
3.4 A "Literary" Solution	51
4. The Subject – Unified or Divided?	52
Chapter Three: Self-Deception: Questions of Authority and Evaluation	56
1. The Standards and the Source of Authority for Attributing Self-Deception	56
2. An Evaluation of Self-Deception	60
3. Collective Self-Deception	65
4. From Philosophy to Narrative Poetics	67
4.1 Truth in Fiction	68
4.2 Motivation in Fiction	69
4.3 Mental Strategies in Fiction	70
Chapter Four: The Unreliable Narrator	71
1. Narrative Unreliability and Other Properties	72
2. Types of Unreliable Narration	76

3.	Attributing Unreliability to Narrators	80
4.	From Discrete Traits to Heterogeneous Components	84
5.	Historicizing Narrative Unreliability	85
6.	Mimetic Discourse and the Unreliable Narrator	88
Chapter Five: Two Versions of the Story: Charles Dickens's Great Expectations		91
1.	The First Hypothesis: The Narrating Character is not Self-Deceived	93
2.	The Second Hypothesis: The Narrating Character is Self-Deceived	95
3.	Self-Deception and the Rules of the Genre	100
4.	Conclusion: The Reader's Oscillation between two Hypotheses	102
Chapter Six: Two Hypotheses for the Narration: Max Frisch's Homo Faber		106
1.	Incoherent World-View and Self-Deception	107
2.	The Reader's Oscillation between Contradictory Clues	112
3.	Three Interrelated Motivations for Self-Deception	114
4.	Two Contradictory Motivations for the Narration	118
Chapter Seven: The Role of Narration in the Release from Self-Deception: Kazuo Ishiguro's The Remains of the Day		125
1.	Self-Deception, World-View, and Self-Image	126
2.	Addressivity and Self-Deception	132
3.	The Ambiguities of a Partial Release from Self-Deception	135
Chapter Eight: The Self-deceived and the Other-deceiving Narrating Character: Vladimir Nabokov's Lolita		139
1.	The Self-Deception Thesis	140
2.	The Other-Deception Thesis	147
3.	Between Self- and Other-Deception	152
4.	Conclusion	157

Chapter Nine: Albert Camus's La Chute : The Dynamics of Narrative Unreliability	159
1. Clamence's Retrospective Story of Self-Deception	161
2. "A Copernican Revolution": Collective Self-Deception	167
3. The Resistant Reader: Reading and Self-Deception	171
Chapter Ten: The Neutral Narration – In Search of Non-existent Certainty: Alain Robbe-Grillet's La Jalousie	178
1. Signals of Homodiegesis	178
2. The Strife for Neutral Narration and its Failure	180
3. Self-Deception and the Motivations for Neutral Narration	188
Conclusion: An Examination of the Mutual Illumination of Philosophy and Narratology as Regards Self-deception	194
1. Self-Deception and Unreliable Narration	194
2. From Philosophy to Fictional Narratives	198
3. From Fictional Narratives to Philosophy	200
Works Cited	211
Index	226