

Contents

	page
INTRODUCTION
Illumination by comparison: why Beckett and Ionesco? – The function and effect of dramatic structures – Godot and audiences in the 1950s – Interviews with Beckett – Forms of imprisonment: San Quentin and the Universe	13
1 THE MORTAL COIL
The problem of mortality, as treated by Beckett, Ionesco, and other dramatists – Contrasting attitudes to birth – Empathic transmission of anguish leading to Heidegger or Pascal	23
2 EXPLORATION AND RESPONSE
The exploration of an 'unusable' zone (Beckett) – Problems of dramatising private fantasies – The trap of psychocriticism (degrading and backward-looking) – The reciprocal interrogation between drama and spectator – The play unperformed: its aesthetic status nil – Ambiguous theatricality of Endgame – Actors must remain unconscious of audience in Beckett's plays – Alienation versus revulsion – Possible dangers of reading or seeing Beckett's plays, as outlined by a psychiatrist (unpublished) – How is a mental state made dramatic? – The artist is not a clinical case	43
3 A BIG PALE BLUR IN THE GREAT DEEPS
Psychodrama, drama as therapy – For whom? – Enactment of problems of self – Victims of Duty – Ontological insecurity – Dreams and nightmares – Endgame and warfare within the split psyche – Crucial relations between the 'inside' and the 'outside' – Endlessness a source of fear – Reactions to the double-bind situation in Godot – Visionary, not personalistic works	58

Angels of Darkness

4 DRAMATIC INTENSITY

It is intensity of response that has to be assessed – Short-term and long-term effects – Progressive limitation and intensification in Beckett's plays contrasted with enlargement of imaginative horizons in Ionesco – Jeux de Massacre and Endgame as a double bill – Beckett's contrapuntal technique – The theme of transience (Heidegger, George Herbert, Bossuet, Musset, Ionesco, Beckett and the Bible: Breath – Irony – Serio-comedy – The quality of silence – Pinter's Landscape and Silence – Norwid and silence – Poetic power – Structural and archetypal hermeneutics – Archetypal images in Beckett and Ionesco – The manuscript of Godot – Engulfment by time: Happy Days, Victims of Duty, Slime (La Vase), Endgame – The structure of Godot and Endgame, and Jungian mandalas: balance and wholeness – Beckett's circular structures and Ionesco's horizontal structures – Assessing dramatic effectiveness – Catharsis – Individual reactions and general truths

71

5 THE SPECTATOR SPEAKS

The critic as spokesman for the spectator – Why and how the Beckett Survey was undertaken – A few striking results – The cosmic equation

98

FINALE

The image of Man

105

NOTES

112

APPENDICES

I The Beckett Survey: Questionnaires – Tables

116

II Some Replies to Open-Ended Questions

129

III A Beckett-Ionesco Chronology

144

IV Select Bibliography

146

INDEX OF THEMES AND IDEAS

148

INDEX OF NAMES AND TITLES

152