

Contents

Preface	ix
Acknowledgements	x

PART 1
APPROACHES AND ATTITUDES – HOW TO GET THE BEST OUT OF YOUR MIND

1 Testing . . . testing	3
The Would-be Student	4
The Earnest Student	5
The Lucky Student	6
The Admirable Student	7
2 Ignition	9
Your brain; or why you can look down on computers	10
The pleasures of bribery	13
How not to bribe yourself	13
Summary	14
3 Lift-off	15
Discover your own best way of working	15
Be honest with yourself; not puritanical	16
If you get bored with something, then STOP	16
Divide your work into manageable chunks	17
Devise a time-table you can stick to	20
Keep physically alert as well as mentally aware	21
Think of your brain as the strongest muscle you possess	22
Rest and recuperation	23
Learn to be selfish	24
Never be afraid to ask	24
Keep reviewing your work	25
Remind yourself what your ultimate

	achievement will be	26
	Conclusion	27
4	Memory	28
	Short-term memory (STM) and long-term memory (LTM)	29
	Memory and do-it-yourself visual aids	32
	The importance of being unearnest	34
	Memory and the environment: where were you then?	34
	Contemplative learning and intensive learning	36
	Memory and frequency	38
	Memory and thoughtfulness: how much do you care?	41
	Mnemonics: the value of do-it-yourself	42
	Memories are made of this	44
	Summary	45
5	Review	48
	Feed-back	51
	Courses are linear, minds are not	54
	Editing and adding	54
	Taking the misery out of revision	55
	Summary	56
	PART 2
	SKILLS AND TECHNIQUES
6	Eyes right: effective reading	61
	Misconceptions	61
	Speed-reading: a six-point programme	69
	The other side of the coin: the pleasures and value of slowness	71
	Afterthoughts: speed-reading and prejudice	73
7	Creative doodling: note-taking for fun and profit	75
	The Grudging Note-Taker	75
	The Reverential Note-Taker	75
	Methods	77
	Key words	78
	Codes and short-hand: inventing your own	85
	Conclusion: note-taking at different stages	86

8	Crunch-time: essay planning and writing	88
	Essay planning	91
	Essay writing	93
	Advanced essay-writing	96
	Energizing patterns: reducing the thought-gap	98
	Conclusion: a check-list of guidelines	103
9	Teachers and how to use them: a student's view	105
	by Chris Pope
	The Spoon-feeder	106
	The Prolix Professor	107
10	Teachers and how to use them: a teacher's view	110
	'Academic' versus 'studious'	114
11	Sources and resources	116
	Reference books	116
	Libraries	120
	Periodicals	121
	The interpretation of reading-lists	123
	Bookshops	124
	Abstracts and indexes	125
	Personal indexes	127
	Conclusion	128
	A personal computer to save your sweat	129
	by David Kelly
12	Computers and study	135
	by Christopher Turk
	PART 3
	EXAMINATION: PSYCHOLOGY AND TECHNIQUES
13	Examinations: psychology and attitudes	145
	Objections to exams	145
	Examiners: friends or foes?	150
	An approach to advanced exams: going beyond mere regurgitation	153

Accuracy versus correctness: exams and ‘the right answer’	154
Do you sincerely want to do well in exams? Then enjoy them	157
Negatively charged	158
Summary: exam-phobia – authentic or phoney	161
Postscript: the problem of ‘A’ levels	162
14 Examinations: preparation hints	163
by Chris Pope
A further objection to exams	163
Examination techniques	164
Revision timing	164
Past papers	165
The day of the exam	166
15 Examinations: skills and techniques	168
Revision	168
The exam itself	169
The examiner’s time-table: an example	173
‘Stating one’s terms’	174
When in doubt, be interesting: show them you can think	175
Conclusion: don’t be frightened	177
Appendix A
Some notes on style	178
Appendix B
Reading novels and creative literature	188
Appendix C
Some simple relaxation and fitness exercises	191
Bibliography	193
Index	195