

CONTENTS

Preface

Acknowledgements

1.	COMPUTERS IN SCHOOLS: AN INTRODUCTION	1
	Computers and the Curriculum	2
	Software Evaluation	4
	Why do we need to Evaluate Software?	5
	Teachers and Researchers	6
	Teachers and Computers	8
	A Versatile Resource	9
	What are Computers good at?	10
	Computers, Schools and Teachers	11
2.	WHEN DOES SOFTWARE BECOME 'EDUCATIONAL'?	14
	Education and Training	14
	Different Views of Education	15
	Software for Sale	16
	A Mechanistic View of Education	17
	Computers and Educational Objectives	18
	Computers and Psychology	22
	The Behaviourist Theories of Learning	22
	Cognitive Theories of Learning	24
	Piaget and Computer Programs	25
	Papert's Logo	27
	Appealing Educational Programs	28
3.	DIFFERENT KINDS OF PROGRAMS: A CASE OF HORSES FOR COURSES	31
	A Case Study: Computers in Upper Schools	35
	The Locus of Control	37

Contents

Chandler's Classification	37
The Hospital Model	38
The Funfair Model	41
The Drama Model	42
The Laboratory Model	45
The Resource Centre Model	47
The Workshop Model	50
Conclusions	53

4. CHOOSING EDUCATIONAL SOFTWARE 54

What Teachers Need to Know	58
Checklists and Rating Scales	60
Modifying Programs	64
Testing a Checklist	68
A Second Experiment	70
From Weakness to Strength	72
General Selection Criteria	73
Documentation (i) Technical	74
Documentation (ii) Information about the program	76
Presentation and Layout	79
Friendliness and Flexibility	83
Achievement of Stated Aims	85
Robustness	86
Specific Selection Criteria	88
Using Other People's Assessments	94

5. USING EDUCATIONAL SOFTWARE 96

Evaluation in the Classroom	97
Ways of Looking at the Problem	98
Quantitative Approaches	99
A Study of Program Effectiveness	101
A Simple Pre-Test, Post-Test Design	104
A Few Simple Rules	107
Using an Evaluation Checklist	108
A Pupils' Checklist	108
A Teachers' Checklist	110
Qualitative Approaches	113
Collecting Data	113
Keeping Field-Notes	113
Using a Detached Observer	117
Keeping a Diary	120
Using the Childrens' Perspectives	123
Using Interviews and Discussions	126
Making Video Recordings	128

Contents

A Brief Note on Interpretation	129
Adapting to the Micro	130
APPENDIX: A SUMMARY OF SOFTWARE SELECTION CRITERIA	131
BIBLIOGRAPHY	137
INDEX	141