

Contents

List of Illustrations	vii
General Editor's Preface	ix
Editor's Introduction to the 2002 edition	xi
Foreword to the 1952 edition	xvii
Acknowledgements (to the 1952 edition)	xix
Preface: 'An almost impossible event . . .'	xxiii

Introduction	1
Flanders at the end of the thirteenth century	1
The war	15
Philip the Fair: Prince of Flanders	19

Part One: Historiography and the Study of the Sources

1 A Problem for Historical Methodology	29
Summary	38
2 The Sources	40
The emergence of Flemish and French versions	40
The sources of the French version	45
The sources of the Flemish version	83
Conclusion: the Flemish and French versions	113

Part Two: Historical Overview of the 1302 Campaign

3 The Terrain at Courtrai	127
The battlefield according to accounts of the period	130
The terrain according to deeds, records and old maps	135
General conclusion on the terrain	150
4 The Two Armies	152
The numerical strength of the two armies	152

The carved Flemish chest at New College, Oxford, and the equipment and arms of the Flemish troops	195
5 From the Bruges Matins to the Battle of the Spurs for freedom, equality and fraternity	211
The strategic problem	218
6 11 July 1302	222
The council of war held in the French camp	224
Preparations in the Flemish army	226
The battle array chosen by the French forces	230
The battle of the crossbowmen	231
The charge of the French left wing	232
The charge of the French right wing	235
The intervention of Jan van Renesse	236
The charge led by Robert d'Artois	237
Crisis and conclusion	238
The flight of the French rearguard and the pursuit	240
General Conclusion	244
Bibliography	251
Index	261

Illustrations

Plan of the battle of Courtrai	xxii
1. Figure on Page 174 of original	134
2. Jacob van Deventer's map	141
3. Louis de Bersaques' map	143
4 & 5. Two maps of the town of Courtrai from Petit Beaulieu	144–45
6. Ferraris' map	146
7. Map of Courtrai as it is today showing the Groeninge stream	148
Plates
The Courtrai Chest, New College, Oxford	196
I. The Bruges Matins	198
II. The arrival of Guy de Namur and Willem van Jülich in Bruges	200
III. Taking the castle of Wijndendale	202
IV. Flemish townsmen with banners of their guilds	204
V. The Flemish battle array on the Groeninge field	205
VI. The sortie of the French knights out of the castle of Courtrai	207
VII. Collecting the booty after the battle	208