

Contents

Preface	iii
Contents	v
Introduction	1
Existentiality in the system of functional-semantic fields and categorial situations	1
Interlinear comments (MORCOMM): signs and conventions	2
Chapter 1. Theoretical orientation	5
1.0. The state of the art of the analysis of Russian existential sentences	5
1.1. Function and meaning in the functional-semantic approach of the Saint Petersburg school of functional grammar	8
1.2. Existential, locative, qualitative, and possessive meaning an function	11
1.3. Syntactic functions of the verbs БЫТЬ and БЫВАТЬ	13
1.4. Russian existential sentences as a functional-semantic field	15
1.5. Data, methodological considerations and aims of the present study	21
Chapter 2. Pure existential constructions	25
2.0. Introduction	25
2.1. Doubtful referents	29
2.2. Human nouns	40
2.3. Metaphorical use of negated existentials (change of habitual quality)	43
2.4. Location in time	45
2.5. Propositional nouns (an accent on the past; special parenthetical words)	47
2.6. Conclusions	51
Chapter 3. Existential constructions with qualitative elements	54
3.0. Introduction. Types of interaction between qualitative and existential construction	53
3.1. Subclasses	56
3.1.1. Subclasses defined predicatively	56
3.1.2. Subclasses defined by analogy to other objects	63
3.1.3. Specific periods of time	67
3.2. Quality	68
3.2.1. Explicit quality	68
3.2.2. Implicit quality	70
3.3. Conclusions	72
Chapter 4. Existential constructions with locative elements	74
4.0. Introduction	74
4.1. Specific places	78
4.2. Non-specific places	81
4.3. Location of persons	86
4.4. Conclusions	87
Chapter 5. Existential constructions in spoken Russian	89
5.0. Introduction. The main tendencies of omission	89
5.1. Implicit request.	94
5.2. Events (temporal marking)	97
5.3. Locations (the tendency to introduce regional or jargon terms)	103
5.4. Quality	108
5.5. Conclusions	111
Conclusion. Existential situations, their features and types	113
Appendix 1. Existential subtypes and heuristic questions	116
Appendix 2. Formal preferences in existential subtypes	120
Sources of literary examples	123

Contents

References	125
Index of authors	134
Index of subjects	136